Return of the number of persons in receipt of relief in districts affected by scarcity.

NOTE.—The figures are compiled from returns obtained from Local Governments and Political Officers, and give the corrected District details of the Provincial totals published weekly in the Crop and Weather Summary of the Gazette of India.
Non-labouring children and other dependants of relief workers are classed as on relief works when distinguished in the local returns from persons gratuitously relieved in poor-houses or at their homes. Weavers relieved in their own trade are shown under "Gratuitous Relief."
The dates at the head of the table are the dates of the Gazette of India in which the Provincial totals were published. The figures, however, actually are the numbers on relief in each preceding week.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department, No. 415-S. R., dated the 22nd January, 1901.

Some misunderstanding having arisen as to the practice referred to in the third paragraph of the Resolution in this Department, No. 4146-S. R., dated the 30th September 1896, it is desirable to define more precisely the practice which should be followed in affixing trade descriptions to certain adulterated goods, namely, linseed oil, turpentine, and paints, under the Indian Merchandise Marks Act, IV of 1889. The following procedure is accordingly prescribed for all ports in India.

2. Such goods should be passed by the Customs authorities if they are marked "reduced," "mixed," "boiled" or "mineral," but if they are adulterated to the extent of 50 per cent or more, the actual percentage of the adulteration must also be conspicuously marked. These orders apply to—

(i) White lead, white zinc, red lead and similar compositions;

Calcutta, 5th February 1901.

No. 510.—HIS MAJESTY THE KING, EMPEROR OF INDIA, has been pleased to send the following letter to the Princes and people of India :—

"TO THE PRINCES AND PEOPLE OF INDIA,—Through the lamented death of my beloved and dearly mourned mother I have inherited the Throne which has descended to me through a long and ancient lineage. I now desire to send my greetings to the Ruling Chiefs of the Native States, and to the inhabitants of my Indian dominions, and to assure them of my heart-felt wish for their welfare. My illustrious and lamented predecessor was the first Sovereign of this country who took upon Herself the direct administration of the affairs of India, and assumed the title of Empress in token of Her closer association with the Government of that vast country.

"In all matters connected with India the Queen-Empress displayed an unvarying deep personal interest, and I am well aware of the feeling of loyalty and affection evinced by the millions of its peoples towards Her throne and person.

"This feeling was conspicuously shown during the last year of Her long and glorious reign by the noble and patriotic assistance offered by the Ruling Princes in the South African War, and by the gallant services rendered by the Native Army beyond the limits of their own country.

"It was by Her wish, and with Her sanction, that I visited India, and made myself personally acquainted with the Ruling Chiefs, the people, and the cities of that ancient and famous Empire.

"I shall never forget the deep impressions which I then received, and I shall endeavour, following the great example of the first Queen-Empress, to work for the general well-being of my Indian subjects of all ranks, and to merit, as She did, their unfailing loyalty and affection.

Indian Staff Corps, employed with the West African Frontier Force.	Captain (Local Major) C. J. Melliss.	On the 30th September 1900, at Obassa, Major Melliss, seeing that the enemy were very numerous, and intended to make a firm stand, hastily collected all stray men and any he could get together, and charged at their head, into the dense bush where the enemy were thick. His action carried all along with him; but the enemy were determined to have a hand-to-hand fight. One fired at Major Melliss, who put his sword through the man, and they rolled over together. Another Ashanti shot him through the foot, the wound paralysing the limb. His wild rush had, however, caused a regular panic among the enemy, who were at the same time charged by the Sikhs, and killed in numbers. Major Melliss also behaved with great gallantry on three previous occasions.

TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Simla, the 22nd May, 1900.

TELEGRAMS FOR THE TROOPS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

No. 9.—The following revised notification is published for general information :—

Until further notice, State and Private telegrams in plain language addressed to persons serving with the Field Force in South Africa will be accepted at Sender's risk, and charged for at the rate of R1-8 per word from offices in India or Burma. Telegrams in Code or Cypher cannot be accepted at this reduced rate. The address should consist of the following :—

(1) The name, or number, or both of the person to whom the telegram is addressed (in the case of officers the rank may be omitted, and in the case of telegrams for Non-Commissioned Officers and men the name may, in like manner, be omitted if the number is given. Such omissions, however, add to the risk of the telegram going astray, more especially when addressed to Non-Commissioned Officers and men), and

(2) The Regiment (this will be counted and charged for as one word irrespective of the number of words used).

These telegrams should be addressed "Bombay for South Africa" (which words will be signalled free), and not to any particular Telegraph Office in South Africa. The Bombay Telegraph Office will forward them to the Officer Commanding at Capetown, who will deliver them to the Addressees at whatever place in South Africa they may be stationed.

Senders of telegrams should accurately describe the Regiment, Battalion, Battery or Corps, to which the Addressees are attached, as it appears in the "Army List." For example: the address of an Officer or Private in the "Rifles" should give the number of the Battalion, and make it quite clear whether it is a Battalion of the "Rifle Brigade," the "King's Royal Rifle Corps," the "Royal Irish Rifles," or the "Scottish Rifles (Cameronians)."

The reduced rate will also apply to telegrams addressed to members of the Nursing Staff serving in South Africa, and any telegrams addressed to a Nurse will be treated in the same way as those intended for soldiers and sailors.

Telegrams for officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men in South Africa who are known to be suffering from wounds or sickness may be addressed to them as if they were with their regiment or corps. Such telegrams, on arrival at the place where the regiment or corps is stationed, will be redirected to the proper hospital.

When, however, the name of the hospital is known to the sender of the message, he may address the telegram direct to that hospital, e.g., "Field Hospital, 1st Cavalry Brigade," or to "No. 2 General Hospital" or to "Mooi River Hospital."

In any case, the telegram should, as already stated, be addressed by the sender to "Bombay for South Africa," which words will not be charged for.

The following are given as examples of addresses and counting :—

"Captain Armstrong, 64th Royal Field Artillery, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "Captain Armstrong, Wynberg Hospital, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "7303 Murphy, 2nd Battalion, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "7303, Mooi River Hospital, Bombay for South Africa" (two words).

II. Notification No. 5, dated the 8th May, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

The 5th December, 1900.

No. 37.—The British Government announces that the transmission of Private telegrams for the Orange River Colony and the Transvaal, vid Cape Colony and Natal, is now suspended.

Telegrams for Pretoria, Johannesburg, Vereeniging, Germiston, Middelburg, Heidelberg, and Standerton are, meanwhile, being accepted for transmission, vid Lourenco Marques, at the usual rates. These telegrams should be written in plain English, and will be accepted only at the risk of the sender. They are also subject to censorship and to delay in transmission.

Calcutta, the 13th December, 1900.

No. 39.—The following revised notification is published for general information :—

The Post Master General, London, announces that the British Government have decided to suspend at Aden and the Cape of Good Hope the transmission of all telegrams in code or cipher, whether of foreign Governments or private persons, to or from British Central Africa, St. Helena and Ascension. Telegrams in plain language are subject to censorship and can only be accepted at the risk of the sender.

Code messages for the following places, viz., Cape Colony, Natal, Rhodesia, Zanzibar, Seychelles, Mauritius, Madagascar, British and German East Africa, Mozambique and Lourenço Marques may, however, be accepted, if the words used are in one, or other, of the following Code Books, which have been deposited with the authorities at Aden, viz. :—

(2) A Z.
(3) Scott's (9th edition).
(4) A 1.
(5) Telegraphenschlüessel of W. Staudt and O. Hundius (published by Julius Springer at Berlin).
(6) The Mercuur Code (2nd edition), enlarged and revised, with the First Supplement.
(7) Broomhall's Comprehensive Cipher Code.
(8) Western Union Telegraphic Code and International Cable Directory, Universal Edition, 1900.
(9) Atlantic Cable Directory of registered addresses and Directory Code, 1898.
(11) Watkins' Telegraphic Code with Appendix (7th edition), 1900.

(12) International Mercantile Telegraph Code (Meyer), 1880.

(13) The General, Commercial and Mining Telegram Code, 1897, by C. A. Moreing and F. C. McCutcheon.

Telegrams should be endorsed to the effect that the words used actually represent the corresponding expressions given in the abovenamed Code Books.

As delays occur at Aden in consequence of the difficulty of determining which code has been employed, senders of telegrams to the abovenamed places in East Africa should write on the message draft the name of the code employed. For instance A B C; A Z; Scott's; A 1; Staudt; Mercuur; Broomhall's; Directory; Atlantic, 1898; Atlantic, 1900; Watkins; Meyer; or McCutcheon. This information will be included in the "Official Instructions" and transmitted free of charge.

II. Notification No. 36, dated the 29th November, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

No. 39-A.—In the event of the establishment in British India of a censorship over telegrams, the first twelve Code Books mentioned in Notification No. 39, dated the 13th of December, 1900, will be used in India for purposes similar to that for which they are employed in Aden.

The public are recommended to provide themselves with such of the codes as may appear suited to their requirements.

The 31st January, 1901.

TELEGRAMS FOR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS OF THE BRITISH AND INDIAN FORCES IN CHINA.

No. 43.—The following revised Notification is issued for general information:—

Until further notice, private telegrams, in plain language, for members of the British or Indian Military and Naval Forces in China, from their friends in India or Burma will be accepted at sender's risk and at the reduced rates mentioned below to the three following stations only, viâ Madras:—

1. To Shanghai at R 0-15-0 per word.
2. „ Weihaiwei „ 1-3-0 „
3. „ Taku „ 1-4-0 „

In the Official Instructions the words "Reduced Rates," should be inserted, and will be signalled free.

Telegrams intended for Military or Naval members stationed at Hongkong should be addressed to Shanghai, and those for members stationed at Tientsin or Pekin should be addressed to Taku. These reduced rates will also apply to telegrams for Civilians in Military or Naval employ in China.

In the address the name and number of the Regiment, Battalion, Battery, or Corps will be counted and charged for as one word, irrespective of the number of words used. For instance, in a telegram addressed to "Capt. Brown, 23rd Field Battery, Royal Artillery, Shanghai," the number of words to be charged for will be four only, instead of eight words, as usual.

II. Notification No. 34, dated the 22nd November, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

Bills introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for making Laws and Regulations, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the exemption from tolls of persons and property belonging to the Army was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 8th February, 1901 :—

WE, the undersigned, members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the law relating to the exemption from tolls of persons and property belonging to the Army was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

From Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 2769, dated 25th November, 1899 [Paper No. 1].

From Resident, Hyderabad, No. 384, dated 23rd December, 1899 [Paper No. 4].
From Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 43-T., dated 22nd December, 1899 [Paper No. 5].
From Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 10433, dated 23rd December, 1899, and enclosure [Papers No. 6].
From Government, Madras, No. 2-L., dated 2nd January, 1900, and enclosures [Papers No. 7].
From Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara, No. 35, dated 6th January, 1900 [Paper No. 8].
From Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 64-XII-398-E., dated 8th January, 1900, and enclosure [Papers No. 9].
From Government, Burma, No. 105-3-M.-8, dated 5th January, 1900, and enclosures [Papers No. 10].
From Government, Bengal, No. 384-M., dated 24th January, 1900, and enclosure [Papers No. 11].
From Government, Punjab, No. 134, dated 25th January, 1900, and enclosures [Papers No. 12].
From Government, Bombay, No. 874, dated 10th February, 1900 [Paper No. 13].

2. The lamented decease of Her late Majesty the Queen, Empress of India, and the accession of His present Majesty, have rendered it necessary to make some verbal alterations in the Bill.

3. Clause 1 (3).—In accordance with a suggestion made by the Government of the Punjab we have proposed the 1st April as the date on which the new Act should come into force, thus making its commencement coincident with that of the coming financial year.

4. Clause 2 (e) : "Landing-place."—We have added words to this definition to make it clear that it covers floating landing-stages.

(f) "Local corps under the Government of India."—We have expunged the words "under the Government of India" both in this definition and elsewhere in the Bill where "local corps" are referred to, because, except in the case of the Hyderabad Contingent, these "local corps" are now under the Commander-in-Chief.

(h) "Tolls."—As this definition stood in the Bill as introduced, it might have been held to include the octroi or town-duties leviable in many towns from which there was no intention to exempt military property. We have therefore amended the definition so as to remove any doubt on this point, and have at the same time, on the suggestion of the Government of Bengal, added words to make it clear that the definition does not include fares for the conveyance of passengers by tramway, which are in some Acts described as tolls.

5. Clause 3, sub-clause (b).—It has been suggested by certain Local Governments that this sub-clause in the Bill as introduced does not cover the case of volunteers when on their way to or from a place for drill or musketry exercise. To meet this difficulty we have added words making it expressly applicable to volunteers "proceeding to or returning from duty."

Sub-clause (d).—As we have redrafted this sub-clause it will cover the case of grass-cutters of mounted volunteers as well as those employed in connection with the chargers of field officers of other volunteer corps. Such volunteers are required to keep up horses which are liable to be called out on duty at any time, and we consider it to be a not unreasonable concession that the grass-cutters of such horses should have the benefit of the new Act at all times in the same way as the grass-cutters of the other corps referred to in the sub-clause.

Sub-clause (e).—Apart from certain slight verbal alterations which we have made in this sub-clause, we have omitted the word "competent" before "military authority" in this and other subsequent sub-clauses, as we think that its retention may possibly lead to difficulties in certain cases.

Sub-clause (f).—We have redrafted the latter part of this sub-clause so as to make it provide, as we believe was the original intention, for all cases where the members of families of officers, soldiers or authorised followers accompany them on duty.

Sub-clause (h).—This sub-clause is new. It takes the place of sub-clauses (h), (i) and (j) of the Bill as introduced, which it consolidates and expands so as to cover the case of persons employed in carrying baggage. It seems to us that the horses, baggage and coolies accompanying the persons exempted under the previous sub-clauses may fairly claim to be similarly exempted.

Sub-clause (k) is also new. The reference to "other animals" in sub-clause (k) of the Bill as introduced was intended to provide for animals required for slaughter, but we have thought it best to deal with such animals as well as those required for any purpose connected with the provisioning of troops in a separate sub-clause.

Sub-clause (l).—This corresponds to sub-clause (m) of the Bill as introduced which we have generalized.

6. Clause 4.—We have amplified the provisions of this clause, which relates to tolls on vessels and the baggage of troops embarking or disembarking, so as to make it cover the horses of such troops and carriages belonging to His Majesty or in His Majesty's military service, which are all exempt under the provisions of clause 3.

7. Clause 5.—On the suggestion of the Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces we have omitted from this clause the words requiring persons demanding and receiving tolls in contravention of the preceding clauses to be tried in a summary way, as we agree with him that there does not appear to us to be any reason why Magistrates who are not invested with summary powers under the Code should be deemed to be so invested for the purposes of this clause, the summary conviction referred to in section 143 of the Army Act being based on a procedure differing widely from that contained in Chapter XXII of the Code.

8. Clause 6 is new. It takes the place of clauses 6 to 9 of the Bill as introduced, which deal in considerable detail with the subject of compensation. We do not anticipate that claims to compensation will be numerous, more especially if the terms of the proposed Act are explained to intending lessees at the annual auctions which we believe take place in February and March. But in case any owner or lessee for a fixed term can show that his interests are prejudiced by the passing of the Act, we think it sufficient to give the Local Government power to direct proper inquiry and assessment of compensation as we have provided in this clause.

9. Clause 7 corresponds with clause 10 of the Bill as introduced. We have given power to the Governor General in Council as well as the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to make rules. We have altered the language of this clause so as to provide for rules prescribing the form of passes to be given under the Act, and we have omitted the words relating to compensation which have been rendered unnecessary by the general provisions of clause 6.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Ports Act, 1889, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 8th February, 1901 :—

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill further to amend the Indian Ports Act, 1889, was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

From High Court, Calcutta, No. 2893, dated 4th December, 1900 [Paper No. 1].
Resolution by Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department, No. 6112 S. R., dated 13th December, 1900, and enclosures [Papers No. 2].
From Government, Burma, No. 604—3 P.-16, dated 19th December, 1900 [Paper No. 3].
From Government, Bengal, No. 18 Marine, dated 3rd January, 1901 [Paper No. 4].
From Government, Madras, No. 5 Marine, dated 7th January, 1901, and enclosure [Papers No 5].
From Government Bombay, No. 216, dated 12th January, 1901, and enclosures [Papers No. 6].

2. In accordance with a suggestion from the Government of Madras, we have specifically provided in the opening words of the new clause (p), which the Bill proposes to add to section 6 of the Indian Ports Act, 1889, for the establishment and regulation of hospitals for the treatment of, as well as sanitaria for the segregation of, persons suffering from, or who have recently recovered from, dangerous infectious or contagious diseases.

3. The Government of Bombay have suggested that the clause should be extended so as to provide for the segregation of "contacts" and "suspects," but we have not been able to adopt this proposal, as it would, in our opinion, be difficult to control the exercise of such a power by Port Health Officers.

4. We have extended from seven to twelve days the period which is fixed by sub-clause (iii) of the new clause (p). We understand that twelve days will cover cases of incubation of small-pox.

5. We have inserted a new sub-clause (v) in the same clause to provide for cases in which vessels, though not coming themselves from infected ports, may bring persons who have been transhipped into such vessels en route from such ports.

6. We have corrected a clerical error which has been discovered in clause 2, sub-clause (a), of the Bill as introduced.

7. Certain proposals for further amendment of the Indian Ports Act in matters relating to port-dues have been made by the Government of Madras. We have not, however, seen our way to considering these proposals in connection with the present Bill, which is limited in its scope to matters connected with health regulations in ports.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

ALTHOUGH the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879 (XXI of 1879), has since its enactment been amended and supplemented on more than one occasion, practical difficulties still arise in its administration, and not a few questions may be raised as to its scope and the construction of some of its provisions. Thus, as regards extradition, the Government have, on the one hand, been confronted with the advice that section 14 of the Act has no application to a requisition for surrender made by a Native State in India; while, on the other, a doubt suggested as to whether the section can be applied where such a demand is presented by or on behalf of an European State led a few years ago to the passing of a supplementary enactment in the form of the Extradition (India) Act, 1895 (IX of 1895). Next, it has been pointed out that the law, as it stands, contemplates the extradition of "accused" or "suspected" persons only, the result being that there is no procedure applicable to the case of a convicted criminal who has escaped into British India or has been surrendered on the demand of the British Government. Again, the passing of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict., c. 69), has introduced, in respect of criminals seeking refuge from other parts of His Majesty's dominions, a procedure which is not consistent with that prescribed by the law of British India. Various matters of administrative importance, moreover, such as the means of enforcing, by proclamation and attachment against absconders, warrants issued in extradition proceedings, and the method of dealing with applications for the surrender of persons under trial or sentence in British India for offences other than those for which their extradition is desired, are still unprovided for. And, finally, as regards foreign jurisdiction, the provisions of the law are surrounded by difficulties, some of which do not merely refer to matters of construction, but go to the root of the legislation represented by the Act of 1879 by raising doubts as to the extent of its validity. For, regard being had to the comparatively limited powers possessed by the Legislature in India, it would seem that the exercise of foreign jurisdiction is a matter which cannot be fully and effectively provided for by an Act passed by the Governor General in Council at a meeting held for the purpose of making laws and regulations.

2. In these circumstances, the necessity for further legislation has for some time past been engaging the attention of the Government of India, and is, it is thought, established. The proposals at first formulated took the shape of a consolidating and amending Bill, repealing and re-enacting, with the modifications desired, the whole of the Act of 1879, which relates, as its short title indicates, to both foreign jurisdiction and extradition. But the two subjects are, in reality, quite distinct; in England they are dealt with by different Statutes, while in India they were, prior to 1872, similarly dealt with by Acts I of 1849 and VII of 1854; and the Courts before which extradition cases come for disposal, are by no means always the same as those which have to exercise foreign jurisdiction. Although, then, it appears to have been deliberately decided, when Act XI of 1872, eventually superseded by Act XXI of 1879, was passed, to "frame a general Act relating to foreign jurisdiction and extradition," the Government of India have, after careful consideration and communication with His Majesty's Secretary of State, arrived at the conclusion that the law will probably be clearer and more intelligible if the two matters are once more kept apart; and it is on this basis that the question is now approached.

3. The present Bill is exclusively confined to the subject of extradition. The legislation required in this country has to make provision for the extradition of criminals in cases of two different kinds. The Government here may, in the first place, be asked by a friendly State to surrender a person in fulfilment of the obligations imposed by a treaty to which the Extradition Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict., c. 52), applies; and, where this is so, it seems expedient that the provisions of the English Statute—and more especially those which are intended for the protection of accused persons—should be followed as closely as may be. In the second place, the surrender of an accused or convicted person may be sought by a Native State in India, or by a neighbouring Asiatic State, in pursuance of the terms of a treaty or friendly understanding to which the Government of India is a party; and in such a case it is desirable and sufficient that the procedure prescribed should be both simple and expeditious. This distinction has been observed in the present Bill, the details of which are explained in the annexed Notes on Clauses.

The 7th February, 1901.

T. RALEIGH.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 2.—The definitions of "conviction," "convicted person," "accused person," "extradition offence" and "warrant" have been taken from s. 26 of the Extradition Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict., c. 52).

The expression "rules" has been defined so as to include forms, as is not infrequently done in English Statutes. It may be useful to prescribe forms for the guidance of officers proceeding under the proposed Act, and it is important that the sufficiency of any forms so prescribed should be recognized.

The definition of "Political Agent," which is to be found in Act XXI of 1879, has been omitted, as it has been given a place in the General Clauses Act, 1897 (X of 1897), s. 3 (40).

Clause 3.—The procedure here laid down has, for the reason already given, been modelled on the Statute of 1870, and follows the English procedure as closely as the circumstances of this country will permit. The person whose surrender is sought for under it, will have a right to submit a statement showing cause against his extradition; and, if an important question of law is raised thereby, it may be referred for decision to the High Court. It is apprehended that in ordinary cases no such reference will be necessary, and it has been left entirely to the Executive Government to decide whether or not any reference should be made.

The clause, like the corresponding provisions in the Acts of 1872 and 1879, refers to all offences. By the Act of 1854, however, the provision was confined to "heinous offences," and it should perhaps be considered whether it might not with advantage here be limited to "extradition offences."

In sub-clause (1) the words "if it thinks fit" have been inserted in order to make it as clear as possible that there are cases in which the Government may decline to order any judicial inquiry; as, for example, where the alleged offence is merely political, where it is obviously trivial, or where there is an ulterior motive or an absence of good faith.

Sub-clause (4) is entirely new. Under the English Statute, the test for extradition is whether the Magistrate would commit for trial. The Indian Act of 1879 fixes no test and leaves it to the Government to determine, as best it can, whether the person concerned should be surrendered or not. But surely the Government ought not to be called upon to decide that question unless a primâ facie case at least has been disclosed to the Magistrate, and the sub-clause has been drawn accordingly.

In order that clause 3 may be thoroughly effective, it may be thought expedient to issue a confirming Order of His Majesty in Council suspending the operation in India of the Statute of 1870. Section 23 of that Statute governs Asiatic treaties; but, when an extradition treaty has been made by the Government in England and the Statute is applied by Order in Council, the Statute apparently applies throughout His Majesty's Dominions unless the Order expressly excepts any part of them. The consequence is that the procedure under the Statute will oust the procedure under any Indian Act, if the person to be extradited belongs to a country which has an extradition treaty with England. The inconvenience likely to arise from the supersession of the local by the unfamiliar English procedure appears to have been considered and provided for by Parliament; for s. 18 of the Statute enacts that, if the Legislature of any British possession passes an extradition law, an Order in Council may either suspend the operation of the Statute in that possession, or direct that the local law shall have effect as if it were part of the Statute. If such an Order should be made, then the Extradition (India) Act, 1895 (IX of 1895), which aims at adapting the Statute of 1870 to India, may, as proposed by clause 18 of the Bill, be repealed, and all extraditions from British India, other than those effected through Political Agents as contemplated by clause 5, would thereafter be governed by the provisions of clause 3.

Clause 4.—In sub-clause (1) a reference to cases falling under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict., c. 69), has been inserted, and in this connection sub-clause (3) has been amplified because the period of detention authorized by that Statute is only one month.

The provisions of paragraph 2 of s. 15 of the Act of 1879 have been recast in sub-clause (2) so as to require a report to the Local Government in every case.

Clause 5.—Where surrender is applied for through a Political Agent, which is the practice almost invariably followed in the case of extradition to any Native State in India, a simple and expeditious procedure is, as has already been stated, all that seems to be required. No inquiry by the Magistrate to whom the warrant is addressed is necessary, and no reference to the High Court need be provided for.

Sub-clause (3) has been added in order to remove all doubt as to the applicability, in the case of warrants in extradition proceedings, of the useful provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code as to the proclamation of absconders and the attachment of their property.

Clause 7.—This is a new provision, which may be found useful.

Clause 8.—As already stated, Act XXI of 1879 is apparently confined to the extradition of "accused" or "suspected" persons. Sub-clause (1) of this clause is intended to cover the case of an escaped convict and also that of a person who is serving a sentence for another offence in a Native State at the time when his extradition is demanded by the British Government. A case of the latter kind actually occurred, and the Native State concerned agreed to hand over the criminal on the condition that, when he had been dealt with in British India for his offence there, he should be returned to undergo the unexpired portion of his sentence. It was found, however, that there was no law which directly authorized such return.

Sub-clause (2), which is new, aims at extending the provisions of the proposed Act to abettors. It is borrowed from section 3 of the Extradition Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict., c. 60).

Clause 9.—These new provisions have been included with the object of expressly laying down the law where application is made for the extradition of a person undergoing a sentence in British India, or where a person is extradited to British India for one offence and appears to have committed another offence prior to his surrender for the first. Sub-clauses (1) and (2) have been taken from the Extradition Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict., c. 52), sections 3 (3) and 19, respectively.

Clause 10 will make it clear that a person for whose extradition a warrant is issued, may, for the purposes of his extradition, lawfully be arrested, confined and retaken in the event of escape.

Clause 11.—It is thought expedient that the executive should have power to interfere at any stage, if for any reason it be deemed desirable to stay extradition proceedings in a particular case.

Clause 12 is new, but requires no explanation.

Clause 13.—These provisions are copied from sections 14 and 15 of the Extradition Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict., c. 52). Cf. also section 29 of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict., c. 69).

Clause 14.—Section 19 of the Act of 1879 provides that evidence shall not be taken on commission by a Court in British India when the alleged offence is of a political character, but it does not provide by what authority that question is to be determined. It is suggested by sub-clause (3) of this clause that the Governor General in Council is the proper authority. It will be observed that cases in which evidence is required for a British Court or tribunal, have, by the addition of a few words to sub-clause (2), been excepted from the general rule against the taking of evidence on commission.

Clause 15.—By this clause it is proposed to exercise the powers conferred by section 32 of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict., c. 69).

Clause 16.—The rule-making power has been somewhat enlarged, and in particular provision has been made for dealing with the surrender of property as well as of criminals, and for the pursuit and arrest in British India of persons accused of extradition offences committed elsewhere. All rules made—and, therefore, forms prescribed—under the Act will be placed beyond the range of criticism by being declared to have effect as if enacted by the Act itself.

Clause 17.—This clause is taken, with some drafting alterations, from the concluding portion of s. 1 of the Act of 1879. It is thus restored to the position which it occupied in the Act of 1872.

Secretary to the Government of India.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, the 26th January, 1901.

Two depressions affected North West India during the week, but they were both feeble and comparatively unimportant. The first which was shown entering Sind on Saturday the 19th January was apparently a double depression with one feebly marked centre lying over Upper Sind and another in Lower Sind. On Sunday it consisted of a low pressure area extending from Lower Sind to West Rajputana and had given a shower at Quetta and light showers in Rajputana and at Mooltan, Delhi and Bareilly. On Monday it had resolved itself into two distinct depressions, one lying over the South Punjab and adjacent districts and the other over South Rajputana and Gujarat with an area of comparatively high pressure lying between them but both depressions were shallow and ill-defined; pressure in the former being in only slight defect and in the latter normal. Light falls of snow were reported from the Upper India hills and light falls of rain from the Submontane and East Punjab. The barometer rose rapidly to very rapidly in Baluchistan and North West India on Tuesday, the rise amounting to nearly three-tenths of an inch at several stations in the Punjab, and both depressions had filled up. Snow had fallen in the Upper India hills and a few showers in the East Punjab, Chakrata receiving 1·88 inches and Umballa 1 inch. Skies were clear over nearly the whole of Northern India on Tuesday, but weather was again disturbed in the Persian Gulf and cloud increased in North West India on Wednesday, due to the approach of another depression from Persia which entered Sind on Thursday and had given light showers in Baluchistan. It had, however, given no rain in North West India and practically filled up in the Central Provinces on Saturday without affecting the weather in any way beyond causing an increse of cloud and a consequent rise in temperature in Northern and Central India.

A few showers have been reported during the week from the south of the Peninsula and Ceylon, the only falls of importance being one of 3·48 inches at Colombo on Sunday, another of 1·18 inches at the same station on Monday and one of 1·50 inches at Tinnevelly on Tuesday. In the weekly returns of rainfall, however, some unusually heavy falls are shown at stations whose names do not appear in the Daily Weather Report.

Rain.—The rainfall of the week has been confined chiefly to Baluchistan, the Punjab, the west of the North-Western Provinces and the south of the Peninsula. It has been equal to or in excess of the normal fall in the Central, Submontane and Hills divisions of the Punjab, the Baluchistan hills, Malabar and the southern divisions of Madras. The Punjab Hills is the only division in which the actual average rainfall of the week exceeded one inch.

The largest amounts received at individual stations are :—

		Inches.
Punjab—	Jullundur	2·32
	Hoshiarpur	2·26
	Dera (Kangra)	2·64
	Dharmsala	2·40
Malabar—	Agastisvaram	4·23
Madras—	Satyamangalam (Coimbatore)	6·12

The last three columns of the table at the end show that the rainfall of the period, December 30th to January 26th, was equal to or in excess of the normal in all parts of the country, except in the divisions of Lower, Central and Upper Burma, Eastern Bengal, the Surma Valley, Gujarat, Kathiawar and Coorg. The excess has been absolutely largest in Orissa, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, the North-Western Provinces, parts of the Punjab, Berar and the Baluchistan hills.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, the 2nd February, 1901.

Madras.—No rain fell anywhere. Water supplies are insufficient for irrigation in parts of the Circars, the Deccan, the Carnatic, the Central Districts and in South Canara. Ploughing, sowing and transplanting are in progress. Standing crops are generally fair, but are withering in parts of Cuddapah, the Carnatic, North Arcot and Madura. Harvests continue with fair yield generally. Pasture and fodder are available generally. Cattle are in normal condition. Prices are stationary or slightly easier, though rice continues above scarcity rate in Kistna and dry staples in parts of the Deccan, North Arcot and Salem. Prospects generally are fair, but are not encouraging in Cuddapah, North Arcot and Salem. Weavers relieved—Cuddapah—1,675 men and 1,320 women. The test works opened in Cuddapah attracted 52 men, 80 women and 31 children; total 163.

Bombay.—Slight rain fell during the week in parts of Karachi, Shikarpur, Hyderabad, and the Upper Sindh frontier districts. Reaping of autumn crops is generally over. Threshing is nearly completed in Kolaba and is in progress in parts of Sindh, Surat and Nasik. Agricultural prospects are good in Sindh, fair to good in the Konkan and parts of Surat, Kaira, Broach, Nasik, Belgaum and Rajkot, and are generally moderate to poor elsewhere. Standing spring crops have been damaged by locusts or other insects in parts of Sindh, and are generally suffering from want of moisture, except in irrigated lands. Harvesting of spring crops is in progress in parts of Nasik, Ahmednagar, Satara, Sholapur, and the Karnatak. Cotton picking is progressing in parts of Hyderabad, Thar and Parkar, Surat, Baroda, and the Karnatak. The fodder supply generally is sufficient, but is scanty in parts of Sholapur, Bijapur and Belgaum. Agricultural stock is in good condition, but is deteriorating in parts of Bijapur. The water supply is getting scanty in parts of Ahmednagar, Sholapur, Belgaum and Dharwar. Prices have fallen in four districts, risen in three districts and are stationary elsewhere. The price of rice is slightly over normal, but is easier than in 1900. The price of bajri is about normal in Gujarat, and considerably over normal elsewhere, but, compared with 1900, is easier in the Konkan and considerably easier in Gujarat, the Deccan and the Karnatak. The price of juar is below normal in Gujarat, and considerably over normal elsewhere; compared with 1900, it is slightly easier in the Konkan and the Karnatak, and is considerably easier elsewhere. The price of wheat is over normal in Gujarat and the Konkan, and about double normal in the Deccan and the Karnatak but is slightly easier than in 1900 in Gujarat, and slightly higher elsewhere.

Daily average numbers on relief—British districts—on test works, 423; on relief works, 113,826; dependants, 23,862; total on works, 138,111. In poor houses, 3,893; on village relief, 34,346; total on gratuitous relief, 38,239. Figures for Ahmedabad, Satara and Nasik are incomplete. Native States—on relief works, 11,161; dependants, 3,991; total on works, 15,152. In poor houses, 1,004; on village relief, 828; total on gratuitous relief, 1,832. Figures for Aundh and Phaltan are incomplete. Grand total 193,334.

Bengal.—No rain. The standing spring crops are generally reported to be doing well, and some of the early crops are being harvested. The pressing of sugarcane is going on. Fodder and water are sufficient everywhere, except in Chuadanga in Nadia. The price of common rice has increased in 17 districts, decreased in 10, and is stationary in the remainder.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—The weather for the most part was cloudy with slight rain in a few districts. Spring crops are doing well, with the exception of wheat, which is slightly damaged by rust and insects in four districts. Ploughing for sugarcane and autumn crops is in progress. Weeding of poppy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Fodder is abundant. Markets are well stocked and supplies are ample. Prices are fluctuating.

Punjab.—Rain has fallen in the Hissar, Ferozepore, Amritsar, Rawalpindi, Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan districts. A slight fall is also reported from parts of the Mooltan, Sialkot and Shahpur districts. Sugarcane pressing is going on in the Jullundur, Lahore, Amritsar and Sialkot districts. Ploughing for autumn crops has been commenced in Multan, Sialkot and Shahpur, and extra spring crops have been sown in the Multan and Shahpur districts. The condition and prospects of standing crops are said to be good. The outturn of sugarcane is reported above average in Sialkot. Good sunshine is needed for the standing crops in Umballa and Sialkot. Recent rain has been beneficial to the standing crops in Dera Ismail Khan. Rust (kungi) has affected wheat on light soils in Umballa and Sialkot owing to cloudy weather and want of sunshine. Locusts appeared in Shujabad, and did a little damage to turnips and wheat crops. The wheat crop is also reported to have been damaged by blight in parts of Amritsar. The condition of cattle is generally good. Pasturage is sufficient in all districts, except in parts of Multan. Prices of wheat are falling in the Lahore, Amritsar, Rawalpindi and Peshawar districts and are rising in Delhi, Umballa and Dera Ismail Khan. Elsewhere they are stationary. Wheat is selling from 9 7/8 to 12, gram 10 to 12½, barley 14, great millet from 27 to 28, bulrush millet from 16 to 27, and maize from 15 to 25 seers per rupee.

Burma.—LOWER BURMA.—Threshing and winnowing are progressing. UPPER BURMA.—Cultivation of dry weather paddy continues. Transplanting has commenced. Threshing of wet weather paddy is progressing, and millet is being reaped in Myingyan. Tobacco, pulse and other miscellaneous, standing crops promise well, except in the Singu and Patheingyi townships of the Mandalay district. The price of paddy has risen in Rangoon and has fallen in Thongwa, Bassien, Pokokku and Bhamo, but elsewhere it is stationary.

Central Provinces.—There has been a good deal of cloud during the last half of the week. The nights and mornings are fairly cool, but the days are growing warm. The wheat crop promises well in most districts, but cloudy weather and insects have caused considerable damage to most other spring crops. Gram has, however, recovered in the Narbudda Valley since the recent rain washed out the insects and new flowers and pods are forming. In Raipur prospects of spring crops, except wheat, are reported very poor. Wheat is being harvested in Wardha and Bhandara. Cotton picking and reaping of juar are nearing completion. The outturn of cotton and juar in Wardha is stated at 90. Pressing of sugarcane is in progress in Bhandara and Sambalpur. Fodder and water are sufficient. Prices are easier in Seoni, steady in Damoh, Mandla and Nimar; elsewhere there is a tendency to rise. The cheapest prices are—wheat 10½, gram 14, rice 14½ and juar 20 seers per rupee. The dearest prices are—wheat 7, gram 8, rice 8½ and juar 14 seers per rupee. The price of juar has risen appreciably in Saugor and the districts of the Narbudda division during the past month. This is probably due to the demand for export. There are 18 persons still on relief in the Saugor poor house.

Assam.—Slight rain fell in Sibsagar and Lakhimpur. Gathering of pulses and mustard, pressing of sugarcane and pruning of tea are in progress. Prospects of sugarcane are good in Lakhimpur and fair in other districts; and of mustard good in Lakhimpur, fair in Sibsagar and bad in other districts. Land is being ploughed for early and late rice. The condition of cattle is generally good. Fodder is scarce in the Khasi and Jaintia Hills, and in parts of the Surma Valley. Water is insufficient in the Khasi and Jaintia Hills, and in parts of Sylhet. Prices—common rice,—Silchar 10 to 11, Sylhet and Dhubri 10, Gauhati 13, Tezpur 10$\frac{12}{16}$, Nowgong and Sibsagar 12 and Dibrugarh 10$\frac{1}{2}$ seers per rupee.

Mysore.—No rain fell in the Civil and Military Station. Standing crops are in good condition throughout, except in parts of Kadur and Chittaldrug. Prospects are good in Bangalore and Mysore, and favourable in Hassan. Paddy, ragi and horse gram are being harvested in parts, while in other parts paddy is being sown. Prices are stationary at Mysore and Chittaldrug, have fallen in other districts, and have risen slightly in parts of Bangalore and Kadur. Cattle are healthy, except in parts of Bangalore and Mysore. Fodder and water are available, except in parts of Chaunigiri of the Shimoga district and Dodballapur of the Bangalore district, where scarcity of water is being felt, and in Chittaldrug, where water is gradually getting scarce.

COORG.—Rice threshing and coffee picking continue. Prices of food grains are stationary. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Berar.—The weather was cool. Cotton picking and juar cutting are almost completed. Winter crops are in fair condition, except in Akola and the Melghat taluqs where wheat and linseed have suffered. Preparation of land has been commenced for ensuing crop in parts of the province. Fodder and water are enough for present requirements. Prices are almost steady.

Hyderabad.—There was no rain during the week. The total from 1st January has been 24 cents. Agricultural prospects continue much the same as last week. Spring crops are being harvested. Castor seed has been spoiled by insects in the Warangal and Nalgundah districts. Total number of persons on relief works during previous week and week under report are, respectively, including dependants, 1,404 and 1,378; gratuitously relieved, 722 and 752. Prices of grain have fallen slightly. Prices—wheat 5$\frac{1}{8}$, coarse rice 7$\frac{1}{8}$ and juar 12 seers per halli rupee.

Rajputana.—Agricultural operations continue satisfactorily. Standing crops are in good condition. Crops have been damaged to one-fourth their extent in Sergarh in Marwar. Agricultural stock is in good condition. Fodder is ample. Cheapest prices range between 12 and 30$\frac{3}{4}$ seers. Number on gratuitous relief, 343.

Central India.—Three cents of rain fell in Gwalior, and none elsewhere. Agricultural operations are in progress everywhere. Standing crops are satisfactory and the probable outturn is estimated to be good. Crops have been damaged on low-lying lands in Malwa and have been partially injured by drought in Bhopawar. The condition of opium is good in Gwalior, Bhopal and Malwa. The condition of agricultural stock is bad in parts of Malwa, and good elsewhere. Pasturage is good everywhere. Prices of food grain are steady in Gwalior and Malwa, high in Bhopal, normal in Bundelkhand and above average in Baghelkhand. Average prices in Gwalior 16 to 19, Bundelkhand 13 to 16, Malwa 16 and Bhopawar 16 to 17 seers per rupee. On gratuitous relief,—Jaora,—29. Number of labourers on Jobat Road, 861.

Baroda.—Standing spring crops are in fair condition and the state of agricultural stock is satisfactory. Prices—bajri 31, juar 34, wheat 19, rice, superior, 13, inferior, 19 pounds per British rupee. Average number on relief works—Baroda territory, 10,139, and on gratuitous relief, 4,573.

Kashmir.—The weather was cloudy generally, with rain and snow in the latter part of the week. Prices are normal, rice being 25 seers the rupee.

JAMMU PROVINCE—Slight rain fell during the week. Prices generally are stationary. Wheat is selling from 10 to 17, and maize 18 to 25 seers the rupee. The condition of standing crops is good. Fodder is sufficient.

Nepal.—No rain fell during the week. The weather is fine, but the mornings are foggy and cold. The price of rice is 8¼ seers per rupee.

MEMORANDUM IN REGARD TO PROCEDURE IN CASES OF CUSTOMS FINES IN RUSSIA.

MEMORANDUM IN REGARD TO PROCEDURE IN CASES OF CUSTOMS FINES IN RUSSIA.

Cases not unfrequently arise of fines being imposed on vessels by the Russian Customs authorities on account of clerical errors in bills of lading or other ships' papers.

Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburg has expressed the opinion that the proper mode of proceeding in such cases appears to be insufficiently known to British ship-owners, who usually address themselves to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, or to the British Embassy at St. Petersburg.

It is essential, therefore, both with a view to avoid delay and in order to secure proper attention to the facts of the case, for the owners or the agents of the vessel or goods on which a fine is imposed to follow the prescribed form of procedure which is to send a petition, drawn up in the English, French, German, or Russian languages, and furnished with the requisite Russian stamps, to the Imperial Minister of Finance, setting forth all the facts of the case, and praying for a remission or reduction of the fine imposed.

Should the applicants fail by this means to obtain redress, or in some urgent cases even before a reply is received to their petition, they may apply direct to Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburg, asking him to support their request; and when this course is adopted, a copy of the petition to the Russian Minister of Finance should invariably accompany such communication; but in no case should the complaint be brought to the notice of the Imperial Government, in the first instance, by the channel of Her Majesty's Embassy or Consulate.

It is particularly important that the necessity should be realized of exact accuracy in, and careful verification of, the weights of goods in documents required by the Russian Customs for the assessment of duty. The Regulations permit a margin either way of 8 per cent. to cover trifling miscalculations or differences due to inherent or other causes. When weight is over-stated, the penalty is that duty is assessed on the weight thus given, or, in other words, the weight of the goods is taken, to the shipper's loss, at his own estimate. In cases of under-estimation a fine is imposed of $3\frac{2}{3}$ the duty on the difference between the given and the real weight.

It should be borne in mind that fines for infractions, however trifling, of the Russian Customs Regulations, are not imposed in a vexatious spirit, but rather in order to insure the strict observance of those Regulations, which a tendency has at times been evinced to disregard. It is therefore of great importance, in order to avoid the imposition of these fines, that ship-owners and shipmasters should make themselves familiar with the requirements of the Russian Customs Regulations, a translation of which appeared in the London Gazette of the 15th June 1886, page 2858.

Foreign Office, November 1900.

M. 11496, dated 12th June, 1886.

The Board of Trade have received, through the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, a copy of a Despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at St. Petersburg, enclosing the following translation of the new Russian Regulations, respecting the clearance of vessels at Russian ports which will come into operation on the $\frac{25\text{th June}}{7\text{th July}}$ next:—

The Russian Department of Customs of the Ministry of Finances has issued the following notification:—

By order of the Minister of Finances, the Department of Customs hereby notifies that the temporary rules approved by His Excellency on the $\frac{17th}{20th}$ April, 1886, and now published respecting lading documents, will be brought into operation after the expiration of two months from the day of their publication.

Temporary Rules Respecting Lading Documents.

Should the master be illiterate, the correctness of his report must be testified in the Board Room of the Custom-house, by him through the medium of translation in the presence of two independent witnesses.

(6) The number of bills of lading, in letters, and the quantity of packages of merchandise, addressed by bill of lading to other Russian ports or for re-exportation also in letters ;

Section 4.—No amendment to a master's report after it shall have been signed by him shall be allowed.

Section 5.—During the examination of a vessel, which by the prescribed rules must be made by the Customs' officers immediately after the report is made by the master, the latter may, without incurring any penalty, make a further report respecting any ship's provisions or appurtenances or any articles destined for the use of his crew (section 479 of the Customs' Code) that he may have omitted to mention in his first report; he must also report all the secret parts of his ship in which goods may be stowed away; also all secret passages or loose planks by means of which access may be gained to the cargo holds (observation to section 485 of the Customs' Code). The notation of these supplementary notifications made on the report by the Customs' officers who examined the ship must be signed by the master, and after this no correction or amplification of the report shall be allowed.

(5) Rates of freight; and

Observation.—If the bills of lading have not been signed by the master, he is bound to sign them before presentation.

Section 8.—No additions to or corrections of bills of lading shall be allowed excepting those that firstly may have been made at the port of departure and that are attested by the local custom-house shipbroker or some official person or institution; and secondly, excepting such additions to or alterations of amounts of single items as will not affect the correctness of the unaltered sum total of the specified quantity of merchandise, also such as may be made in the sum total, which will still be in agreement with several single unaltered totals; in these two cases, corrections shall be allowable without attestation, everything else that may be added, corrected, or re-written after erasure shall be considered as not appearing in the bill of lading, if it be not attested in the manner indicated in this paragraph at the port of departure.

Section 9.—When the name of the consignee of goods shall not be specified in the bills of lading the goods shall be considered as brought to order, and shall be deliverable to the owners on their producing proofs (duplicate bills of lading) of ownership of the merchandise.

A bill of lading shall be considered null and void when it shall not contain any of the following particulars, and the goods to which it refers shall be treated as imported without a bill of lading :—

(1) Quantity of packages or pieces (excepting goods brought in bulk);
(2) Marks and numbers (for goods in packages);
(3) Denomination of the goods; and
(4) Quantity of goods.

Section 10.—If on the discharge of a vessel's cargo it shall appear that goods requiring bills of lading have been brought without any, or if the master shall not have made mention of such goods in his report, these goods shall be arrested and security given by the shipmaster (section 1716 of Customs' Code) to the following extent :—

(a) five times the duty if the goods be dutiable,
(b) double value of the goods if the goods be of a prohibited nature, and
(c) 10 per cent. ad valorem on non-dutiable goods.

Section 11.—Among the goods indicated in the preceding paragraph, those belonging to the prohibited class shall in every case be confiscated, and the owner of them, or the shipmaster, should he not designate the owner, shall be mulcted in a fine amounting to double their value (section 487).

As regards dutiable and non-dutiable goods, if in the course of a year, reckoning from the time of their landing, their owner shall appear and prove by bill of lading or invoice that they were consigned to him, they shall then be delivered to such owner with the exaction of a payment, in addition to the duty of 10 per cent. "accidence" in the case of dutiable goods and without the infliction of any penalty in the case of non-dutiable goods. At the same time a fine shall be inflicted on the shipmaster to the extent of the duty leviable (section 539), for not entering dutiable goods in his report; on payment of the penalty his security, if the same has been supplied by him, shall be returned to him in full.

If in the course of a year no owner for these goods shall appear, such goods shall be declared as belonging to the shipmaster, and in accordance with rules respecting goods secretly imported, they shall then, in the case of dutiable goods, be confiscated with the imposition of a five-fold duty, while for non-dutiable goods a fine of 10 per cent. ad valorem (section 542 of the Customs' Code) shall be imposed.

Section 12.—If goods not designated in bills of lading shall be specified in the shipmaster's report as having been brought addressed or to order, such goods shall be dealt with as follows:—

(a) Prohibited goods shall be confiscated according to prescribed rules (section 1551 of Customs' Code); further, if such goods shall have been brought to the address of any person, and have been entered in the report, the shipmaster shall not in such case suffer any penalty (section 1554 of the Customs' Code). If, however, these goods be declared by the shipmaster as brought to order, and if he do not indicate any owner or receiver residing in the Empire, he shall be fined two roubles per each poud gross weight of such goods, and when the fine shall have been paid by him he shall be furnished with a certificate of such payment to enable him to obtain repayment from the shipper or consignor (section 1555 of Customs' Code);

(b) Non-dutiable goods shall be deliverable without the infliction of any penalty (observations to section 539 of Customs' Code); and

(c) For dutiable goods, if the owner appear and prove his claim to them within the period indicated in the preceding paragraph, an "accidence" penalty shall, in addition to the duty, be levied on him, or on the master in his absence, of 10 per cent. Moreover, security for the payment of this fine as also for that to which the shipmaster shall be liable under point (a) of this paragraph, shall be furnished by the shipmaster.

Section 13.—If on the discharging of a vessel a package of goods shall be deficient, the nature and quantity of which shall be specified in the bill of lading presented, the shipmaster shall pay duty on the same, computed at the rate to which the highest class of such missing goods is liable, the owner of the goods having his remedy at law against the shipmaster (section 543 of Customs' Code).

Section 14.—If the deficiency of packages occur in such goods as may only be specified in the report and not in the bills of lading, or the nature and quantity of which shall not have been stated in the latter, the Custom-house, on receiving from the Ware-house Inspector and the Visiting Officer of the Customs, a report of the final discharge of the cargo of a deficiency of goods, shall immediately demand from the consignee of such missing goods the original invoice relating to them which such consignee is bound to supply within 48 hours, reckoning from the time when he shall have received an intimation from the Custom-house on the subject, and the said consignee shall, in the Board Room of the Custom-house, confirm by declaration that the invoice is in orginal and that it is not falsified in any way. According to this invoice, the shipmaster shall then pay an amount of duty to which the highest class of the goods deficient would be liable. If the consignee or his authorised agent shall not furnish the invoice within the time prescribed or should he present it and not testify to its authenticity and correctness, or should the consignee of goods declared to be imported to order not appear, a fine of 200 roubles shall be payable by the shipmaster for each deficient package of merchandise as for contents unknown, and until he shall pay such fine or shall furnish a bond given by persons of known standing and trustworthiness rendering themselves fully responsible for him, the vessel shall not be allowed to leave the port (section 544 of the Customs' Code).

Observation.—The testimony of the consignee respecting the authenticity and correctness of the invoice presented in such case binds him in the same degree as if he had made such testimony under oath (observation to section 544 of Customs' Code).

Section 15.—If a bill of lading bear an inscription attested by the persons and institutions designated in section 8, to the effect that a dispute arose at the time of shipment between the shipper and shipmaster respecting the number of packages specified in the bill of lading, the infliction of penalties under such bills of lading for a surplus or deficiency of goods shall be regulated according to the quantity of goods in dispute, as recorded in the bill of lading.

In the same manner a shipmaster shall not be liable to a penalty for a deficiency of goods, as compared with the quantity specified in his bills of lading, when a notation respecting such deficient packages shall have been made by a foreign Custom-house, or when the shipmaster shall present other clear and trustworthy proof that the deficient packages of goods were discharged on the voyage (sections 471 and 545 of the Customs' Code), or not taken on board at all, or further, when the shipmaster shall make a statement of average in his report on arrival at the port, and also note and make a protest (section 470 with observation thereto). Subsequent proofs shall not be accepted.

Section 16.—If goods imported shall be shown in number of pieces (section 7), without specification of weight, and a deficiency or surplus in the number shall occur, the duty penalty provided by sections 11—14 for the deficient quantity shall be computed in accordance with sections 13 and 14, either by the invoice presented by the consignee, or else on the maximum weight ascertained by the Custom-house of the pieces of which the parcel of goods brought consists. In case of a surplus, such surplus shall be dealt with according to general rule; but if in addition to the number of pieces the weight shall also be stated in the bill of lading, a penalty for a deficiency or surplus shall in such case only be exacted when the declared weight, verified by the Custom-house, shall prove, in cases of deficiency less, and in cases of surplus greater, in a degree equalling at least some one of the pieces or packages of the whole parcel, at the same time the amount of the duty penalty shall be computed only on the foregoing difference in weight.

Section 17.—If in the shipmaster's report of passengers' list any passengers' packages shall not be stated, and if a passenger who may have arrived by the vessel shall claim them, a fine of ten roubles shall be inflicted on the shipmaster for every package of passengers' luggage not declared; if no claim be laid by any of the passengers to a non-declared package, the shipmaster shall be liable to the penalty prescribed in section 11, which provides for cases in which goods in the absence of owners are recognized as belonging to the shipmaster (section 541 of the Customs' Code).

Section 18.—The operation of the preceding paragraph shall not extend to packages which on examination shall be found to contain passengers' effects that have been in use, even though if among them may be found a small quantity of dutiable articles evidently appertaining to a passenger and not intended for sale, such packages may be kept in custody during the space of one month, and if, during the same, its owner appear with clear proofs of ownership it shall be delivered to him on payment of duty, if any be due, and without the infliction of any penalty. If no owner shall appear in the course of a month, the articles contained in the package shall be publicly sold at the Custom-house, and the money realized by the sale, after deduction of duty, if any such be due, shall be paid to the Crown.

(4) The quality in general terms of each description of goods contained in each package, as for instance, manufactures of cotton, wool, silk, etc.

Section 470.—If a shipmaster has encountered a storm or suffered average, and if, in order to save the ship, he has thrown a portion of his ship's cargo overboard, or has, from some cause or other, left a part of his goods at another port, or if he be simply in doubt as to the completeness of the cargo, and if he have the intention of making, or has already made a protest, he must make mention of any of these circumstances in his declaration, particularly specifying the number and nature of the packages thrown overboard or left at another port, or his reason for doubting the completeness of his cargo.

Observation I.—A shipmaster having reason to suppose that his cargo has suffered average must notify the same to the Public Notary within the prescribed period of 24 hours, and also report the circumstance in his Custom-house declaration; the protest itself may be made within seven days after his arrival at the port. In order that the Custom-house may know what shipmasters intend protesting or have protested the Public Notary is bound to report weekly to the Custom-house all the protests that have been noted or made by shipmasters, and it shall be the duty of the Custom-house to notify such information to the mercantile body in lists posted at the Exchange or Custom-house.

Section 471.—Packages in dispute may be entered by a shipmaster in his report, provided only that a notation has been made at the port of their shipment on the bills of lading that the number of such packages is in dispute, or if the shipmaster present clear and trustworthy evidence that certain packages were not shipped or discharged by him on the voyage.

Section 479.—Should a shipmaster when making his report omit to specify a portion of the ship's provisions and appurtenances, or anything serving for the use of his crew, he shall be permitted to add the same during the examination of the vessel (in accordance with sections 484 and 485), by a member of the Custom-house and inspector.

Section 485.—During the examination the captain is bound to open all cupboards, cases, chests and trunks, both his own and those of his crew, and all places which serve and might serve to conceal articles or goods, without evasion or concealment, under a penalty of one hundred roubles.

Section 487.—For the prevention of smuggling, passengers and members of a ship's crew are liable to be searched on leaving a vessel. If any person shall remove anything from a vessel, and be caught in the act, everything so removed, excepting articles duty free, shall be confiscated, and the person guilty shall be fined as follows:—

Five-fold duty on dutiable articles, double the value on prohibited goods, 10 per cent, ad valorem on duty-free goods not confiscated, this latter fine being levied in favour of the detector.

A Custom-house watcher who shall even unconsciously be a party to an act of smuggling, or knowingly allow the removal of anything from a ship, or who may not report such removal shall be dismissed the service.

Section 539.—When a shipmaster omits to enter any portion of his goods or packages in his declaration (report), and should they be found on the discharge of the vessel, and at the same time not appear in the bills of lading presented by the master, and should the owners of the goods come forward within the time appointed for clearing them, and prove either by bill of lading or invoice that the goods had been sent to them, in such cases the goods shall be delivered to the owner on payment of the duties, and accidence fine of 10 copecks per rouble of duty for importation without bill of lading, and the master shall, moreover, pay for the benefit of the Crown a fine equal to the duty leviable on the goods.

Observation.—The shipmaster shall not be liable to any fine if the goods omitted in the declaration, and for which no bill of lading has been produced, be free of duty.

Section 541.—Should the goods omitted in the declaration belong to the master they shall be confiscated, except in case they be goods liable to no duty, when the master shall incur the penalties specified in section 487.

Section 542.—Should the master not include in his declaration such packages or goods as are not entered in the bills of lading annexed to his declaration, and should the goods be unclaimed within the period prescribed, they shall be considered to belong to the master, who shall be liable to the penalties specified in the foregoing paragraph.

Section 543.—For every package shown in the master's declaration and which shall not be found on the discharging of the vessel, and should the quality and quantity of the missing goods be shown in the bill of lading annexed to the master's declaration, the master shall be liable for the amount of duty chargeable on the highest class of such goods, and the merchant may bring an action in the competent Court against the shipmaster for the loss of such goods.

Section 544.—Should the deficiency occur in goods for which the master shall not have presented bills of lading, or should their nature and quantity not be indicated in the documents presented, the Custom-house, on receipt of a report from the proper officers to the effect that the vessel has been discharged and that there is a deficiency in the goods as declared, shall demand from the person to whom, according to the declaration, the goods are addressed, the original invoice, which he shall present within 24 hours, reckoning from the day on which he shall be summoned to produce such invoice, and he shall then be called upon to declare before the Board the correctness and authenticity of such invoice.

The master shall then be called upon to pay on the missing goods the amount of duty chargeable on the highest class of such goods should the owner of such goods, or his agent, not present the invoice within the time above specified, or should he not declare that the invoice which he shall have presented is true and authentic, the master shall pay for each missing package a fine of 200 roubles for the benefit of the Crown, and the vessel shall be detained until such fine be paid.

Observation —The declaration of a merchant respecting the correctness of an invoice shall be as binding on him as an oath.

Section 545.—The master shall be liable to the penalties specified in the foregoing paragraphs even should he have entered in his declaration as in dispute the goods which shall not be found on examination, unless an inscription to the same effect shall have been made on the bills of lading, or unless the master be able to produce clear and reliable evidence of the packages not having been taken on board, or of their having been discharged elsewhere on the voyage, or again, unless the evidence which he shall present be considered satisfactory.

These rules shall not, however, apply to goods imported in bulk declared in number, or for which bills of lading need not be produced.

Section 1551.—All prohibited foreign goods intercepted, found, or detected; also goods, the exportation of which is not allowed, seized while being secretly exported abroad, shall be confiscated, and their owners or the persons smuggling them, if they cannot indicate the owners or the seller of them in the interior of the Empire or in the Kingdom of Poland, shall be fined double the value which these goods will realise when sold.

Section 1554.—A shipmaster, lighterman, or carman who may have brought prohibited goods addressed to some person, and who may have reported such goods in his declaration, shall not be liable to a fine.

Section 1555.—A shipmaster, lighterman, or carman who may have brought prohibited goods to order, and who shall not have indicated their owner or receiver residing in the Empire or in the Kingdom of Poland, shall, if the goods be not described in his declaration or way bill by their proper designation, be liable to a fine of two roubles for each poud gross weight of such goods, which shall, moreover, be confiscated. Respecting such confiscation, he shall be supplied with a certificate, in order that he may seek compensation from the shipper or consigner.

ART. 40.—All provisions to the contrary are revoked.

FEDERAL CAPITAL,
7th August 1900.

Dated 20th November 1900.

From—MARTIN GOSSELIN, Esq., Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs,

To—The Under-Secretary of State for India.

I am directed by the Marquess of Lansdowne to transmit to you to be laid before the Secretary of State for India a copy of a despatch from the Acting British Consul General at Rio de Janeiro enclosing a summary of the new Brazilian regulations respecting Consular Invoices, and I am to add that His Lordship learns from a telegram from Her Majesty's Minister at Rio that the Brazilian Government do not propose to enforce the application of these regulations until January 1st.

A similar letter has been sent to the Colonial Office and a copy of the despatch to the Board of Trade.

No. 11 (Commercial), dated 24th October 1900.

To—The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

It is already generally known that since the beginning of the current year, there has been in existence a Brazilian law requiring Importers of goods and merchandise into this country to present invoices authenticated by Consular Officers at ports of shipment, containing certain specified particulars for official use.

The enforcement of the law has been kept in abeyance pending the formulation of an adequate code of Regulations, but this work has now been completed and published in the Government organ—Diario Official of the 20th instant.

Herewith, I transmit a copy in the original, and regret that pressure of work prevents me from making a full translation at present, but I annex a cutting from the Brazilian Review in which the general principles observed by the Regulations are summarized.

It will be noticed that the Regulations are to be enforced at the various Consulates fifty days after publication, that is, from 20th instant, except in the case of India and New Zealand, for which countries an interval of sixty days is allowed.

CONSULAR INVOICES.

The new regulations, published in the Diario Official of the 20th instant, will come into force in all countries, excepting India and New Zealand, on the 10th December next and in the different custom-houses here as invoices commence to arrive.

The general principles observed by these regulations are as follows :—

All merchandise, including specie and bullion despatched from foreign countries for Brazilian ports must be accompanied by the corresponding Consular invoices with the exceptions enumerated in Article 3.

These invoices may be made out in Portuguese or in the language in use at the port of shipment and must be legalised exclusively at that port.

The declarations contained in the invoice shall determine—

1. Name of ship in which the goods are shipped ;
2. Port of shipment ;
3. Port of destination ;
4. Value of the goods ;
5. Freight and expenses ;
6. Premium on the money current at the port of shipment, if any.

On the back of the invoice the goods are to be detailed, giving marks and numbers of the packages, specification of the merchandise, its net and gross weight, value, including or excluding freight and expenses, of each different kind of goods, and country of origin of same.

These data are obligatory including the statement of approximate freight and expenses, and omissions will make consignees liable to fines.

Description of the merchandise may be either specific, giving the name of each separate article with the material of which it is composed ; or may be generic, in accordance with the official nomenclature organised for that purpose; it is, however, absolutely forbidden to make use of generalisations, such as "Cotton Textiles," "Ironware," etc., not admitted in this nomenclature. Infringement in this respect will subject the consignee to fines.

Translations have been prepared of the nomenclature and regulations into English, French, German, Italian and Spanish, and will be shortly available. We recommend their use to shippers, because not only will they, by adhering to the official denominations, avoid all possibility of fines for mal-descriptions, but will find the labour of description greatly attenuated and facilitated.

Although declaration of origin is exacted, proofs will not be demanded at present, nor until a differential tariff be enforced against the goods of any country, of which there is no immediate prospect.

The routine to be followed with regard to these invoices is as follows :—

(1) The invoice must be filled up by the merchant and forwarded to his agent (if shipped at another place) to be legalised (viséd) at that Consulate. The original, of which three copies are to be made, must be stamped and. after being viséd, be handed to the shipper to be forwarded with the bill of lading to the master of the vessel who, in his turn, must return it with the corresponding invoice and manifest to the Consul to be forwarded to the respective custom-house. The Captain must note in the margin of his manifest any goods shipped for which no invoices have been received, his notes being certified to by the Consul, as also the cause of non-reception of the invoices by the Captain. On this being done the Captain will have no further responsibility on arrival, otherwise he will be liable to fine for non-delivery of invoice.

(2) Of the three copies of the original invoice, one will be forwarded by the Consul to the Statistical Bureau; a second will be retained at the Consulate; and the third handed to the shipper to be forwarded to the consignee to accompany despatch of the goods at the custom-house. Without the corresponding invoice no despatch can be granted except on signature of a bond (termo de responsabilidade).

(3) The declaration of the invoice may be made in the language used at the port of shipment or in Portuguese, as desired, a translation of same being in the former case presented by the consignee on despatch of goods at the customs-house; this translation need not, necessarily, be by public translator.

The fee for legalisation of Consular invoices will, for the current year, be $5 gold payable in stamps to be applied to the original only. This of course does not exempt from payment of the tax on bills of lading ($2). It is, however, proposed to reduce the dues for Consular invoices to $3 only, and an amendment to that effect has been introduced into the Estimates by the Senate; but even when passed can only take effect from the 1st January.

No. R. & S. 3326, dated 23rd November 1900.

From—Sir CHARLES E. BERNARD, K.C.S.I., Secretary, Revenue and Statistics Department,

To—The Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

I am directed by the Secretary of State for India to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 20th November 1900, concerning the new orders whereby invoices of goods for Brazilian Ports must contain specified information and must be signed by the Brazilian Consul at the port of despatch

A copy of these papers will be sent forthwith to the Government of India. And I am to express the hope that the full text of the Regulation (either in English or in Portuguese), with an English copy of the nomenclature to be used on the invoices, may be furnished at an early date.

True copies.

H. S. BARNES,

REVIEWS THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CIVIL VETERINARY DEPARTMENT IN INDIA FOR THE YEAR 1899-1900.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture, No. 1—143-2, dated the 4th February 1901.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

The Annual Administration Report of the Civil Veterinary Department in India for the official year 1899-1900.

The horse-breeding operations of the year were once again seriously hampered by famine which extended to some of the best grounds. Notwithstanding the high rates that prevailed for grain and the excessive fodder famine, the cost of maintaining Government stallions has been kept within reasonable limits. The supervision exercised by the Inspector General, Civil Veterinary Department, and his Superintendents over expenditure on this head reflects credit on these officers.

2. The number of Government stallions actually employed at stud work and the number of mares covered was slightly less than in the previous year. The results of the year's stud operations do not materially differ from those of preceding years. The returned number (3,695) of foals produced was below what might reasonably be expected, and judging from the figures given in paragraph 55 of the report more work is thrown on thorough-bred stallions in the North Punjab than is in accordance with accepted practice in other countries. Horse-breeding under Provincial Governments continues to give satisfactory results and has proved a most useful adjunct to Imperial Horse-breeding.

3. A larger number (1,613) of remounts was secured in the year for the native cavalry, and the market for young stock for private purposes continued keen. But the Remount Department was no more successful than in the past in finding animals suitable for British cavalry, and the reports received from regiments on the country-bred horses in their ranks are not encouraging. These and other kindred matters noticed in the Report will receive the careful consideration of the Commission recently appointed to investigate in all its aspects the entire question of horse-breeding in India with particular reference to the production of suitable remounts.

4. The Inspector General reports more favourably on the English thorough-breds sent out during the year, and remarks that the imported Australian sires continue to fully maintain the reputation of the horses sent out in previous years. The Bombay market for Arab stallions also shows a marked improvement and has again quite reached the standard of former years, some exceptionally fine animals having been secured by Veterinary Colonel Queripel. In the Resolution reviewing the report for last year, the Government of India drew attention to the extremely low prices realized for rejected stallions, and they now observe with satisfaction that the wide publicity given to forthcoming sales has resulted in much better prices being obtained for such animals.

5. In connection with the tables in the report showing stud work performed by donkey stallions, the Government of India observe that the average number of coverings per stallion is still high especially in the North Punjab, where it appears to be excessive. On the whole, however, the results of the mule-breeding operations were satisfactory and indicate steady progress and an increasing interest in the subject. The demand for donkey stallions is increasing year by year. The paucity of good donkey stallions, however, continues to be felt, but the matter is receiving the careful consideration of Government who are fully alive to its importance.

6. As was to be expected, the famine seriously affected the success of most of the horse fairs and shows held during the year, the want of fodder being responsible for the abandonment of no less than 11 of these shows. Its evil effects will doubtless be more clearly seen in the fairs and shows to be held during the next two years. There was a large decrease in the number of animals exhibited, although the number competing for prizes showed but little falling off. Probably only such animals as were considered likely to take prizes or be sold were taken to the fairs. The large increase in the number of remounts purchased at these fairs is also a matter for congratulation. Horse, and to a less extent, mule-breeding in the Native States, were also affected by the prevailing drought, but, taken as a whole, the results obtained are encouraging and reflect credit on those Chiefs who are giving this important subject their attention.

7. The Instruction Farms at Babugarh and the Government Cattle Farm at Hissar, though labouring under considerable disadvantages, did useful work and show good results.

8. During the year under review the Imperial Bacteriological Laboratory at Muktesar, with most of its valuable library, records and specimens, was destroyed by fire. This has handicapped the Bacteriologist's work, but the restoration of the building was promptly taken in hand and completed, and, under the able direction of Dr. Lingard, valuable work is being done, both in the field of research and in the manufacture of serum for the purpose of rinderpest inoculation.

9. Glanders and Farcy have been almost universally prevalent, the disease unfortunately spreading to the Remount Depôts where prompt measures were at once taken for its repression with good effect. In order to prevent the extension of the disease, stringent rules have been enforced on all railways for the cleaning of vehicles used for the conveyance of live-stock, and posts of observation have been established on the trade routes leading into British territory to prevent the introduction of the disease from countries beyond the Frontier. It is, however, in the seaports and other large towns that the disease chiefly exists, and strenuous measures should be taken by all Provincial Governments to eradicate this fatal malady.

10. The number of cattle attacked by disease in its various forms throughout India is reported to have been 429,351, of which number 147,145 or 34·27 are said to have died. In addition the mortality among cattle in consequence of the famine was enormous and in parts of the Bombay Presidency assumed such vast proportions that Government were compelled to establish cattle camps under European supervision in order to save even a small proportion of the animals. The Government of India are glad to observe the increasing attention which is being paid by Local Governments to the treatment and prevention of cattle disease. In Burma where the Superintendent has been able to devote practically his whole attention to this subject, there has for some years been an organized staff of Veterinary Assistants for the treatment of outbreaks of disease and this system is now being extended to most of the other provinces. In Berar an improved form of registration has been introduced which will be the means of obtaining earlier intimation of the prevalence of disease and enable Veterinary Assistants to be sent without delay to the scenes of outbreaks. The work of preventive inoculation against rinderpest was entrusted to the Assistant to the Inspector General, Civil Veterinary Department, and in all 3,384 animals were inoculated. Inoculation has not yet been introduced into Burma, but the attention of the Superintendent has been directed to this point. The provisions of the Live Stock Importation Act, IX of 1898, which had for its object the regulation of the importation of live stock into India, have not been put into force as the Queensland Government undertook to take such precautionary measures as would prevent the introduction of the Tick plague into this country.

11. The working of veterinary dispensaries continues to be very satisfactory. A start has been made in the North-Western Provinces, whilst additional institutions have been opened in Bengal and the Central Provinces. Madras is the only presidency in which no such institutions exist. The value of these establishments is great, and Provincial Governments should endeavour to increase the number as opportunity and funds offer. The work done by Veterinary Assistants outside veterinary dispensaries has also been good.

12. Little has hitherto been done in connection with the important subject of cattle-breeding. This is mainly due to the paucity of officers in the Department and the need for more Veterinary Assistants in the districts. At present the little that is done in this direction is done by Provincial Agricultural Departments, but it is hoped that, as soon as additional officers and Veterinary Assistants are appointed, this matter will receive greater attention. As a beginning, the Government of India have agreed to grant prizes at cattle-shows similar to those sanctioned for horse-shows with a view to encourage the improvement of the breeds of cattle in India.

13. The results of the final examinations at the several Veterinary Schools and Colleges were generally satisfactory, the Bengal College being the most successful. The Government of India have recently approved of the curriculum drawn up by the Veterinary Conference held at Umballa in January last in order to ensure uniformity of teaching in the several Veterinary Institutions in India.

14. The thanks of the Government of India are again due to Veterinary Colonel Queripel and to his officers for their hearty co-operation in the work of the Department.

INDIAN TOLLS (ARMY) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR CHARLES RIVAZ presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the exemption from tolls of persons and property belonging to the Army. He said:—"I explained, when introducing this Bill, that its object was to combine in a single Act the provisions relating to the exemption from tolls of persons and property belonging to the Army which are at present scattered over a large number of local enactments in force in different parts of India and to bring these provisions into harmony with those of the English Army Act. Clause 3 of the Bill, which contains the list of proposed exemptions, has been carefully considered by the Select Committee in the light of the opinions received from Local Governments, and it has been revised as explained in the Committee's report, but no material alterations have been made in it.

"The Bill as introduced contained three clauses dealing with the question of compensation to contractors, local authorities or other persons on account of losses incurred in consequence of the proposed new exemptions from tolls. These provisions have been simplified and condensed into a single clause.

"I need only further mention a point raised by the Punjab Government, namely, that special provision ought to be made for giving compensation to the contractor or manager of a ferry when additional boats and labour, in excess of the ordinary requirements of such ferry, have to be provided for troops using it. The payment of remuneration in such cases for the special services demanded and rendered is obviously equitable and necessary, but the matter seemed to the Select Committee to lie outside the present Bill altogether, and we have accordingly made no provision for it."

INDIAN PORTS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RALEIGH presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Ports Act, 1889.

MILITARY LUNATICS ACT, 1877, AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MAJOR-GENERAL SIR EDWIN COLLEN moved that the Bill to amend the law relating to the admission of Native Military Lunatics into Asylums be taken into consideration.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MAJOR-GENERAL SIR EDWIN COLLEN moved that the Bill be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

ADMINISTRATOR GENERAL'S ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR CHARLES RIVAZ moved that the Bill further to amend the Administrator General's Act, 1874, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Raleigh, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur P. Ananda Charlu, the Hon'ble Kunwar Sir Harnam Singh, the Hon'ble Sir Andrew Wingate and the mover, with instructions to report within one month.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN EXTRADITION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RALEIGH moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Extradition and Rendition of Criminals. He said:—"The Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act of 1879 is so familiar to the Judicial and Political Officers of Government that the proposal to recast and amend its provisions may seem to require a few words of explanation. There are at present two laws of extradition in force in British India. The Act of Parliament which was passed in 1870 applies here as it applies throughout the British Empire, except where it has been excluded by the orders of Her late Majesty in Council. On the demand of a Power which has a treaty with the British Government to which the old Act applies, we may be called upon to co-operate in surrendering a criminal who has come into British India, and any such application would involve us in the somewhat difficult task of adapting provisions, which are expressed in the language of the English procedure and are suited directly only to the English Courts, to our own Courts in practice.

"One object of the Bill which I now ask leave to introduce is to devise a procedure which may, as we hope, be accepted by His Majesty's Government and by the Treaty Powers as an efficient substitute, or rather as the British Indian version of the procedure established by the Imperial Act. We have endeavoured in framing the Bill to preserve the same safeguard for accused persons which is provided for by the Act of 1870, that is to say, that where there is a question of law that ought to be fairly argued before the extradition takes place, we shall provide for the question being raised and for the opinion of a superior Court being taken upon it; we also preserve what is an important feature in the procedure of the Imperial Act, namely, the complete control of the Executive Government over all extradition proceedings at every stage. I ought to say that, if the Bill which I now ask leave to introduce is passed, we shall not at once be in a position to ask for an Order in Council excluding the English Act. Difficult questions may arise connected with the territorial limits of our legislative power, but we hope that, as our procedure becomes understood, it may be accepted as a substitute for the Imperial Act. In the meantime, we do not propose to exclude the Imperial Act in case it may be necessary to fall back upon its provisions.

"The other law of extradition is our own Act of 1879 to which I have referred. Some of the provisions of the Act are, as my predecessor Mr. Chalmers expressed it, remarkable for their vagueness, and with regard to some of the most important of them we are obliged to say that in the absence of judicial authority no confident opinion can be given as to the occasions on which they were intended to apply. The one merit of the Act is that it has established a convenient procedure which is in common use in cases of extradition between British India and the Native States. To appreciate the necessity of a simple and expeditious procedure in such cases, it is only necessary to look at the map of India; to see how the boundaries of the Native States are interlaced with those of the territories of this Government, and to see especially how lines of railway often cross the political boundaries again and again, so that one may pass into and out of British India several times in the course of a day's journey. That being so, it is necessary, as I say, that we should have a simple and expeditious procedure, and this we have endeavoured to preserve in the provisions of the Bill. We have also taken the opportunity of adapting to our own use the procedure established by the Fugitive Offenders Act of 1881, which was intended by Parliament to regulate the rendition of criminals by the Government of one part of the British Empire for trial or punishment in another part.

"There is still one subject to which I must refer in introducing the Bill. The Act of 1879 provides not only for extradition but also for foreign jurisdiction. Now in the English Statute-book there are separate Acts providing for these two subjects; and it appears to us that inasmuch as the two are governed by different principles it is most expedient to deal with them separately here. I am not at present in a position to say exactly what our proposals in regard to foreign jurisdiction will be, because we have not yet received a final expression of the views of the Secretary of State; but before the Bill, if I obtain leave to introduce it, is taken into consideration, we hope to be able to state exactly how we propose to provide for the important subject of foreign jurisdiction, and thereby to make it possible to repeal the Act of 1879. I hope, my Lord, that these observations will be sufficient to explain at all events the main objects of the Bill. The details are highly technical, and Hon'ble Members who wish to understand them will find the explanation they require in the Notes on Clauses appended to the Statement of Objects and Reasons."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. RALEIGH introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble MR. RALEIGH moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the local official Gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments think fit.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 22nd February, 1901.

Comptroller and Auditor General.

TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Simla, the 22nd May, 1900.

TELEGRAMS FOR THE TROOPS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

No. 9.—The following revised notification is published for general information :—

Until further notice, State and Private telegrams in plain language addressed to persons serving with the Field Force in South Africa will be accepted at Sender's risk, and charged for at the rate of Rı-8 per word from offices in India or Burma. Telegrams in Code or Cypher cannot be accepted at this reduced rate. The address should consist of the following :—

(1) The name, or number, or both of the person to whom the telegram is addressed (in the case of officers the rank may be omitted, and in the case of telegrams for Non-Commissioned Officers and men the name may, in like manner, be omitted if the number is given. Such omissions, however, add to the risk of the telegram going astray, more especially when addressed to Non-Commissioned Officers and men), and

(2) The Regiment (this will be counted and charged for as one word irrespective of the number of words used).

These telegrams should be addressed "Bombay for South Africa" (which words will be signalled free), and not to any particular Telegraph Office in South Africa. The Bombay Telegraph Office will forward them to the Officer Commanding at Capetown, who will deliver them to the Addressees at whatever place in South Africa they may be stationed.

Senders of telegrams should accurately describe the Regiment, Battalion, Battery or Corps, to which the Addressees are attached, as it appears in the "Army List." For example: the address of an Officer or Private in the "Rifles" should give the number of the Battalion, and make it quite clear whether it is a Battalion of the "Rifle Brigade," the "King's Royal Rifle Corps," the "Royal Irish Rifles," or the "Scottish Rifles (Cameronians)."

The reduced rate will also apply to telegrams addressed to members of the Nursing Staff serving in South Africa, and any telegrams addressed to a Nurse will be treated in the same way as those intended for soldiers and sailors.

Telegrams for officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men in South Africa who are known to be suffering from wounds or sickness may be addressed to them as if they were with their regiment or corps. Such telegrams, on arrival at the place where the regiment or corps is stationed, will be redirected to the proper hospital.

When, however, the name of the hospital is known to the sender of the message, he may address the telegram direct to that hospital, e.g., "Field Hospital, 1st Cavalry Brigade," or to "No. 2 General Hospital" or to "Mooi River Hospital."

In any case, the telegram should, as already stated, be addressed by the sender to "Bombay for South Africa," which words will not be charged for.

The following are given as examples of addresses and counting :—

"Captain Armstrong, 64th Royal Field Artillery, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "Captain Armstrong, Wynberg Hospital, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "7303 Murphy, 2nd Battalion, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "7303, Mooi River Hospital, Bombay for South Africa" (two words).

II. Notification No. 5, dated the 8th May, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

The 5th December, 1900.

No. 37.—The British Government announces that the transmission of Private telegrams for the Orange River Colony and the Transvaal, viâ Cape Colony and Natal, is now suspended.

Telegrams for Pretoria, Johannesburg, Vereeniging, Germiston, Middelburg, Heidelberg, and Standerton are, meanwhile, being accepted for transmission, viâ Lourenco Marques, at the usual rates. These telegrams should be written in plain English, and will be accepted only at the risk of the sender. They are also subject to censorship and to delay in transmission.

Calcutta, the 13th December, 1900.

No. 39.—The following revised notification is published for general information :—

The Post Master General, London, announces that the British Government have decided to suspend at Aden and the Cape of Good Hope the transmission of all telegrams in code or cipher, whether of foreign Governments or private persons, to or from British Central Africa, St. Helena and Ascension. Telegrams in plain language are subject to censorship and can only be accepted at the risk of the sender.

Code messages for the following places, viz., Cape Colony, Natal, Rhodesia, Zanzibar, Seychelles, Mauritius, Madagascar, British and German East Africa, Mozambique and Lourenço Marques may, however, be accepted, if the words used are in one, or other, of the following Code Books, which have been deposited with the authorities at Aden, viz. :—

(3) Scott's (9th edition).
(5) Telegraphenschlüessel of W. Staudt and O. Hundius (published by Julius Springer at Berlin).
(6) The Mercuur Code (2nd edition), enlarged and revised, with the First Supplement.
(7) Broomhall's Comprehensive Cipher Code.
(8) Western Union Telegraphic Code, and International Cable Directory, Universal Edition, 1900.

(10) Atlantic Cable Directory of registered addresses and Directory Code, 1900.
(11) Watkins' Telegraphic Code with Appendix (7th edition), 1900.

(12) International Mercantile Telegraph Code (Meyer), 1880.

(13) The General, Commercial and Mining Telegram Code, 1897, by C. A. Moreing and F. C. McCutcheon.

Telegrams should be endorsed to the effect that the words used actually represent the corresponding expressions given in the above-named Code Books.

As delays occur at Aden in consequence of the difficulty of determining which code has been employed, senders of telegrams to the abovenamed places in East Africa should write on the message draft the name of the code employed. For instance A B C; A Z; Scott's; A 1; Staudt; Mercuur; Broomhall's; Directory; Atlantic, 1898; Atlantic, 1900; Watkins; Meyer; or McCutcheon. This information will be included in the "Official Instructions" and transmitted free of charge.

II. Notification No. 36, dated the 29th November, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

No. 39-A.—In the event of the establishment in British India of a censorship over telegrams, the first twelve Code Books mentioned in Notification No. 39, dated the 13th of December, 1900, will be used in India for purposes similar to that for which they are employed in Aden.

The public are recommended to provide themselves with such of the codes as may appear suited to their requirements.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, the 2nd February, 1901.

The depression in the Central Provinces on Saturday the 26th January filled up by Sunday morning without giving any rain, but weather conditions were slightly unsettled and skies cloudy in Baluchistan and North-West India on Sunday, and Chaman reported a light shower of rain. Cloudy weather continued in Baluchistan and North-West India on Monday, but no rain was reported. On Tuesday the barometer fell briskly to rapidly over this region and a shallow depression which had given light showers in Baluchistan was shown entering North-West India, and lying over Lower Sind and South-West Rajputana. The depression advanced into the northern districts of the Central Provinces on Wednesday, but gave no rain and it filled up during the next 24 hours. While this depression was filling up in the Central Provinces, another was approaching Baluchistan from Persia and apparently entered the southern districts of the Punjab on Friday and filled up the same day, giving light showers in Baluchistan and Upper India. A third depression was shown on Friday morning lying over the Gulf of Cambay and was practically unchanged in position or character on Saturday. It had given no rain and up to Saturday had not influenced the weather to any important extent.

With the exception of a few showers in Baluchistan and Upper India, the weather of the past week, though cloudy and slightly unsettled in North-West India, has been fine over the whole country, and temperature has been in general excess, the excess being most marked in Sind, Rajputana, Gujarat and the Deccan.

Rain.—Very little rain has fallen during the past week. The only divisions in which the average rainfall of the week exceeded one-tenth of an inch were: the Brahmaputra Valley, Sind and the Baluchistan Hills; and in all divisions where rain has fallen the amounts reported have been in defect of the normal. The largest amount received at any individual station was 1·20 inches at Murree.

From the last three columns of the table at the end it will be seen that the rainfall of the period December 30th to February 2nd has been equal to or in excess of the normal in the Brahmaputra Division of Assam, Bengal (except East Bengal), Orissa, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Punjab, Baluchistan, Sind, Rajputana, Central India, Berar, the Central Provinces, the Bombay and Malabar Coast Districts (with the exception of Coorg) and Madras. It has thus been in excess or normal over by far the greater part of the country and has been in defect in only Burma, the Surma Valley, the Assam Hills, East Bengal, Gujarat, Kathiawar and Coorg.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, the 9th February, 1901.

Madras.—There was no rain during the week except in Travancore and some light showers in the Nilgiris. Water supplies are insufficient in parts of most districts. Sowing and transplanting are in progress in parts. Standing crops are generally in fair condition, but are withering for want of water in parts of Cuddapah, the Carnatic, the Central districts and Madura. Harvests continue with moderate outturn. Pasture and fodder are generally available. The condition of cattle is generally normal. Prices continue high generally. The price of rice is above the scarcity rate in Kistna, and that of dry staples in parts of the Deccan, North Arcot and Salem. Prospects generally are fair, but are not encouraging in Cuddapah, North Arcot and Salem One test work opened at Cuddapah employs 134 men, 209 women and 68 children, total 411. Advances to weavers give employment to 1,631 men and 1,326 women.

Bombay.—Very slight rain fell during the week in parts of the Shikarpur and the Upper Sindh frontier districts. Reaping of autumn crops continues in parts of the Broach, Surat and Khandesh districts. Threshing has been completed in Kolaba and is in progress in parts of Sindh, Surat and Nasik. Agricultural prospects are good in Sindh, fair to good in the Konkan and parts of Kaira, Surat, Broach, Nasik and Belgaum, and are generally moderate to poor elsewhere. Standing spring crops have been damaged by locusts or other insects in parts of Sindh and Ahmedabad, and generally are suffering from want of moisture except in irrigated lands. Harvesting of spring crops is in progress in parts of Nasik, Ahmednagar, Satara and the Karnatak. Cotton picking is progressing in parts of Hyderabad, Thar and Parkar, Broach, Surat, Belgaum, Dharwar and Baroda. The fodder supply generally is sufficient, but is scanty in parts of the Karnatak. Agricultural stock is in good condition, but is deteriorating in parts of Bijapur. The water-supply is getting scanty in parts of Ahmednagar and the Karnatak. Prices have fallen in four districts, risen in two districts and are stationary elsewhere. The price of rice is slightly over normal, but easier than in 1900 in Gujarat, the Konkan and the Karnatak and about the same in the Deccan. The price of bajri is about normal in Gujarat and considerably over normal in the Deccan, the Karnatak and the Konkan, but, compared with 1900, is easier in the Konkan and the Karnatak, and considerably easier in the Deccan and in Gujarat. The price of juar is slightly below normal in Gujarat; and is considerably over normal elsewhere and, compared with 1900, is easier in the Konkan and the Karnatak, and considerably easier in the Deccan and Gujarat. The price of wheat is over normal in the Konkan and in Gujarat and about double normal elsewhere and, compared with 1900, is slightly easier in Gujarat and higher elsewhere.

Daily average numbers on relief—British districts—on test works, 439; on relief works, 109,854; dependants, 23,277; total on works, 133,570. In poor-houses, 3,625; on village relief, 34,204; total on gratuitous relief, 37,829. Figures for Ahmedabad, Khandesh and Nasik are incomplete. Native States—on relief works, 11,160; dependants, 4,000; total on works, 15,160. In poor-houses, 1,012; on village relief, 819; total on gratuitous relief, 1,831. Figures for Aundh and Phaltan are incomplete. Grand total 1,88,390.

Bengal.—A few showers have fallen in Bihar and some of the districts of Chota Nagpur and Bengal Proper. In Shahabad and Palamau the rainfall is reported to be unfavourable to the spring crops. Rain is needed in Faridpur, Bogra and Pabna. Threshing of winter rice and pressing of sugarcane are going on. Ploughing for the jute and bhadoi is beginning. Poppy is doing well except in Monghyr. Fodder and water sufficient except in Chittagong and Chuadanga. The price of common rice has risen in fifteen districts, fallen in five, and is stationary in the rest.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—There was general rain throughout the provinces. Hail fell in ten districts, but no serious damage to crops was done except in some villages of Sultanpur. Standing crops on the whole are doing well. The spring crops, especially wheat, have been slightly damaged by rust and insects in eight districts. Prospects continue favourable. Sugarcane pressing and preparation of lands for extra crops are going on. Weeding of poppy is in progress and extraction of opium has been commenced in places. Supplies and fodder are ample. Prices are steady.

Punjab.—Rain has fallen in all districts except Ferozepore. Pressing of sugarcane continues in the Jullundur, Lahore and Sialkot districts. Ploughing and sowing of autumn and extra spring crops have been commenced in the Ferozepore, Mooltan, Sialkot, Shahpur and Dera Ismail Khan districts. Irrigation of spring crops is going on in the Lahore and in parts of the Dera Ismail Khan districts. The condition and prospects of standing crops are said to be good. Good sunshine is much needed in Umballa and Sialkot. The outturn of sugarcane is above average in Sialkot. The recent rain has been beneficial to the standing crops in the Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan districts. Rust has affected wheat in the Umballa and Sialkot districts. Owing to want of sunshine gram has been injured in some low fields in Umballa. Slight damage has been done to turnips by locusts in Tahsil Kabirwala in the Mooltan district. Hail fell in some villages of the Lahore district, but did no damage. Cattle are generally in good condition. Pasturage is sufficient in all districts except in parts of Mooltan. Prices of wheat are rising in Hissar, falling in the Delhi, Amritsar, Shahpur, Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan districts and are stationary elsewhere. Wheat and gram are selling from 10 to 12, maize 15 to 30, barley 14, great millet 25, and bulrush millet 16 to 26, seers per rupee.

Burma.—LOWER BURMA.—Threshing and winnowing are progressing. UPPER BURMA.—Transplanting of dry weather paddy is proceeding, reaping of millet in Myingyan continues and gathering of cotton and chillies has been commenced in Singbaungwe Township of the Thayetmyo district. The state of standing crops is unchanged. The price of paddy has risen in Thongwa, Thaton and Meiktila and has fallen in Akyab and three other districts.

Central Provinces.—The weather was very cloudy and sultry at the commencement of the week, culminating in some light showers. The sky has now cleared and colder weather has supervened. The prospects of the wheat crop continue to be fair to good, and an outturn above the normal is expected in Betul, but rust in a mild form has attacked wheat in Damoh and Narsinghpur. Hail also fell in Seoni, Bhandara, Balaghat and Mandla, but the damage is not appreciable in the last district. Damage to pulse and linseed by insects continues in most districts. The wheat harvest has commenced in the Nagpur country where gram and linseed are also reaching maturity. Cotton picking is almost completed in Balaghat and Sambalpur where recent showers have softened the soil. Fields are being ploughed for summer sowings. Pressing of sugarcane is in progess in Bhandara and Sambalpur. Fodder and water are ample. The price of juar is steady, but the rates for other grains have stiffened in most districts in consequence of short stocks and export demand. Wheat is selling at 6½ seers the rupee in Chanda and Wardha. The cheapest prices are—wheat 10, gram 14, rice 14, and juar 20 seers per rupee. The dearest prices are—wheat 6½, gram 8, rice 8½, and juar 13⅜ seers per rupee. There are 18 persons still on relief in the Saugor poor-house.

Assam.—Slight rain fell in Cachar, the Naga Hills and the Garo Hills, and heavier rain in Sibsagar and Lakhimpur. Gathering of pulses and mustard and pressing of sugarcane are in progress. Pruning of tea is nearly finished. Prospects of sugarcane are good in Lakhimpur and fair in other districts. The prospects of mustard are good in Lakhimpur, fair in Sibsagar and bad in other districts. Land is being ploughed for early and late rice. The condition of cattle is generally good. Fodder is scarce, and water is insufficient in the Khasi and Jaintia Hills and in parts of the Surma Valley. Prices—common rice, Silchar and Sylhet 10, Dhubri 9½, Gauhati 12½, Tezpur 10 to 11, Nowgong and Sibsagar 12, and Dibrugarh 10½, seers per rupee.

Mysore.—No rain fell in the Civil and Military Station. Standing crops are in good condition throughout except in parts of Kadur. Prospects are good in Bangalore, Mysore and unfavourable in Shimoga and Kolar. Paddy, wheat, horse gram and Bengal gram are being harvested in parts, while in other parts paddy is being sown. Prices are stationary at Chitaldrug and Mysore, have risen in Hassan, Kolar and parts of Kadur, and have fallen in Shimoga, Tumkur and other parts of Kadur. Cattle are healthy. Water and fodder are sufficient except in parts of Chenagiri in the Shimoga district where scarcity of water is being felt, and in Chitaldrug where water is gradually getting scarce.

Coorg.—Threshing of rice is in progress. Coffee picking is nearly completed. Prices of food grains are stationary. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Berar.—The weather was generally clear and cool with occasional clouds. Cotton picking and threshing of juar are reaching completion. All winter crops except wheat and gram are in fair condition. Land is being prepared for the ensuing crop in parts of four districts. Fodder and water are sufficient. Prices are fluctuating.

Hyderabad.—No rain fell during the week. The total from 1st January has been 24 cents. The weather continues cloudy and this tells upon the standing spring crops which are under harvest. Calcutta, the 20th February 1901.

No. 902.—In exercise of the powers conferred by sections 17 and 27 of the Indian Arms Act (XI of 1878), the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that the following further amendments shall be made in the Notification of the Government of India in the Home Department, No. 518, dated the 6th March 1879, as amended by subsequent Notifications :—

Paragraph I.—For the words and figures "sections 13, 14 * * * * * * * and ammunition", substitute—

"section 14 of the Indian Arms Act, 1878 (XI of 1878), save in respect of cannon, articles designed for torpedo service, war-rockets and machinery for the manufacture of arms and ammunition, and from the operation of all prohibitions and directions contained in sections 13, 15 and 16 of the said Act, save as aforesaid and in respect of rifles of ·303 bore, rifles of ·450 or ·577 bore of the Snider or Martini-Henry pattern, and ammunition for such rifles."

Paragraph VI.—Add the following proviso (or additional proviso as the case may be) to Rules 2 (clause 1), 6, 6C, 13, 13A, 14, 15 and 16 :—

"Provided that (or Provided also that) in the case of breech-loading rifles and balled rifle ammunition the license shall not (except in the Presidency towns of Madras, Bombay and Calcutta, and in Rangoon, where the Commissioner of Police will continue to grant such licenses) be granted without the previous sanction of the Board of Revenue in Madras, of the Chief Commissioner in Assam and of the Commissioner of a Division in other Provinces."

NOTE.—The reference to ammunition is not intended to be included in this proviso so far as the latter relates to Rule 13A.

Paragraph VI.—Add to Rule 2 (clause 1) the following proviso :—

"Provided that no license for the transport of breech-loading rifles or balled rifle ammunition to a frontier district shall be granted without the previous sanction of the Local Government or, in the case of transport from Sind, of the Commissioner in Sind."

Paragraph VI.—Add as a Note to Rule 5 :—

NOTE.—No such license will be granted for the importation of any rifles of ·303 bore or of rifles of ·450 or ·577 bore of the Snider and Martini-Henry patterns.

Paragraph VI.—Add to Rule 6 :—

Licenses to export arms, other than cannon, or rifles not excepted in Rule 5, ammunition or military stores by sea to any place in His Majesty's dominions may be granted at the ports of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Rangoon, Calicut, Karachi and Aden by the Commissioner of Police in respect of each Presidency town and Rangoon and by the Magistrate of the District in respect of the others. There shall be no fee payable in respect of such licenses which shall be given in Form IV of license forms annexed to these rules.

Arms, ammunition or military stores in the possession of a passenger not exempted under Paragraph I above, arriving in a vessel bound for a Foreign Port and calling at a British Indian Port en route shall be detained by the Collector of Customs pending the departure of such passenger by sea.

Paragraph VI.—Omit the word "or" at the end of clause (b) of Rule 8 and add as clause (d) :—

(d) in the case of breech-loading rifles and balled rifle ammunition, whether the previous sanction of the Local Government (the Commissioner in Sind in the case of Sind) or other prescribed authority, as the case may be, has been obtained.

Paragraph VI.—Add to Rule 11 after the words "appended to these rules" :—

"But licenses to manufacture, convert, keep or sell or keep for sale breech-loading rifles, rifle ammunition or military stores for rifles shall be granted only by the Local Government or, in the case of Sind, by the Commissioner in Sind, and shall be in Form VI—B or VII—B so appended. The Local Government may under this rule grant licenses to selected dealers to hold a certain amount of ammunition for rifles of ·303 bore, or rifles of ·450 or ·577 bore of the Snider or Martini-Henry pattern, on the condition that the license-holders shall not sell from this stock to any person who does not hold a license to possess any such ammunition."

Paragraph VI.—Add the following new rule after Rule 13A :—

"13B. Licenses for the possession of reasonable quantities of balled ammunition which can be fired from rifles of the ·303 bore or rifles of ·450 or ·577 bore of the Snider or Martini-Henry pattern, shall be granted by the Commissioner of Police in the Presidency towns and in Rangoon, and by the Magistrate of the district outside those towns, in Form VIII prescribed by Rule 13. Such licenses shall be granted on application to any person lawfully in possession for sporting purposes of a rifle of the ·303 bore, or a rifle of the ·450 or ·577 bore of the Snider or Martini-Henry pattern, and shall state the amount of such balled ammunition which he may possess in the following twelve months. Duly licensed dealers shall be allowed to import their balled ammunition up to the quantity stated in their licenses. Upon every license produced in support of an application for leave to import, the quantity of ammunition to import which leave was given, and the date of giving it, shall be endorsed by the authority by whom leave is granted."

SURVEY OF INDIA DEPARTMENT,
Calcutta, 2nd January, 1901.

J. M. FLEMING, Major, S.C.,
Offg. Asst. Surveyor General,
In charge Map Record and Issue Office.

THE HONOURABLE THE RESIDENT IN MYSORE.

NOTIFICATION.

The Resident's Office, 15th February, 1901.

No. 767.—In exercise of the powers reserved to him by the Notification of the Government of India in the Foreign Department, No. 500-I.A., dated the 7th February, 1901, the Honourable the Resident in Mysore is pleased to direct that the following rules for taking the Census of Railway servants and others residing on railway premises and travellers by rail shall apply to the railways in Mysore over which jurisdiction has been ceded to the British Government:—

Census of Railways.

1. Open line.—In the case of an open line of railway the term—

(1) Railway premises includes a railway station within distant signals, a workshop, and all other premises within the railway boundaries on which permanent or temporary employés of the railway reside, except gangmen's and gatemen's huts and similar isolated buildings outside the distant signals of stations.

(2) Charge means the section of line, falling within the railways in Mysore over which jurisdiction has been ceded by the Mysore Government, under a Charge Superintendent appointed by the Railway authorities for this purpose.

(3) Circle means a station or railway premises under a Supervisor, who will ordinarily be the station master or other official in charge of the premises. Large circles will be divided into blocks.

(4) Block means a group of not more than 50 houses under the charge of an Enumerator and forming part of a circle.

2. Line under Construction.—In the case of a line under construction the Census operations will be under the charge of the Engineer-in-Chief, who will be guided by the above definitions so far as they are applicable, and will act in consultation with the Deputy Commissioner of the District.

3. Persons to be enumerated.—The classes of the population to be enumerated by the Railway authorities are—

A.—Persons residing within railway premises, whether on open lines or lines under construction.

CLASS A.—Residents

4. Residents defined.—The term "residents" includes all persons sleeping on "railway premises" on the night of the 1st March 1901.

It does not include—

(a) Signalmen, gangmen or gatemen living in small isolated houses and huts beyond distant signals whether within or without the railway fences. These will be included in one of the blocks of the nearest village or town, and will be enumerated by the civil officers along with the ordinary population of that block.

(b) Railway servants or others who work on railway premises either by day or night, but who habitually return to their houses outside "railway premises" when off work.

But it does include—

(c) Large collections of railway labourers sleeping near the railway works on which they are employed, but outside station limits or "railway premises" as defined by the distant signals. Such should be enumerated by the Railway officials who employ them.

5. Census Divisions.—The first step to be taken is to parcel out all railway premises into charges for Superintendents, circles for Supervisors, and blocks for Enumerators. The partition should be territorial and not departmental, and in each charge a single officer of the railway must be made responsible for all the Census arrangements therein. Ordinarily a station or premises will form a circle, which will be divided into blocks, if large enough to render this necessary. Very large premises, such as collieries or extensive workshops, may be treated as a distinct charge which may be divided into circles of about 500 houses each. The form of register annexed (Appendix No. A) should be used in forming Census divisions. The instructions annexed to it show how each column should be filled up. An extract comprising all the entries for each charge should be sent to the First Assistant to the Resident in Mysore. The preparation of the register should be commenced at once, and completed by the end of December, 1900. Where railway premises are much mixed up with the houses of the civil population, a map should be prepared, and the respective jurisdictions settled in consultation with the civil officials.

6. House numbering.—A list for each station or railway settlement should be prepared, in the form of the block list annexed to the general schedule, showing the number and description of buildings included in each block; and all buildings must be numbered with paint or some other material for the guidance of the Enumerator. The numbers should run in the order in which he will visit each building on the night of the 1st March. In writing up this list a note should be made in the last column against the houses where household schedules have to be left.

7. Appointment of Census Officers.—Superintendents, Supervisors and Enumerators should be appointed in writing by the chief Railway authorities, and, as far as possible, should be their employés. In circles where there is a considerable European or Eurasian colony, they should be Europeans or should know English well. At small stations the same person may enumerate both residents and travellers, so as to save training two different men. Deputy Commissioners will be instructed (a) to superintend the training of the Supervisors and Enumerators, (b) to assist in procuring Enumerators where the Railway employés are not natives of the Province and are not acquainted with the names of the castes, sects and occupations of the people.

8. Schedules.—The enumeration will be effected through schedules, of which two kinds will be issued—(a) Household Schedules in English for Europeans and Eurasians, and Natives sufficiently well acquainted with the English language, to be filled in by the head of each family, and returned to the Enumerator on the morning of the 2nd March; and (b) General Schedules, in which the Enumerator fills in the entries for each person at the dictation of the head of the family. The Supervisor of the circle is responsible for seeing that both kinds are correctly filled up. Each schedule contains room for ten persons per page. Each house should be commenced on a fresh page. In the case of Europeans and Eurasians the return for Native servants and their families on the premises is to be made by the Enumerator of the block on the general schedule with the other Native residents of the block schedule.

Along with the schedules there will be issued a copy of Sections VI, VII and VIII of the Mysore Census Procedure Code containing detailed instructions for enumeration, a specimen schedule, and an abstract to be filled up by the Enumerator after the Census. After the block list has been written up, the number of general schedules required to enumerate the block should, with the block list, be stitched inside the cover, in such a manner that the stitching can be undone later on when the household schedules have to be bound up with the general schedules. A register in Form No. C must be kept of all forms issued to Supervisors and Enumerators.

9. Preliminary enumeration by general schedules.—Early in February every Enumerator should fill in the general schedule for each house in the manner prescribed in the instructions printed in Section VI of the Mysore Census Procedure Code. This task should be completed by the 20th February, and during its progress the Supervisor should test all the entries by house to-house visits.

10. Final enumeration.—On the night of the 1st March beginning from about 8 or 9 o'clock, the Enumerator must again visit every house in his block and see that the entries are brought up to date, in accordance with his instructions regarding visitors, births, and deaths not previously recorded. It may be noted that according to those instructions, employés who are on duty on the night of the 1st March, but are not travelling with any train, should be recorded as present in the house where they are entered in the general schedule, or where a household schedule has been left.

11. Procedure with household schedules.—The household schedules should be left with the head of each family about the 24th of February and his signature taken in the last column of the block list. On the morning of the 2nd March they must be collected, examined on the spot by the Enumerator, and corrected, where necessary, on his suggestion. They must then be bound up in the book of schedules.

12. Provisional Totals.—On the morning of the 2nd March the Supervisor will have the Enumerator's abstract compiled for each block according to the instructions inside the cover and in Section IX of the Mysore Census Procedure Code. He should then compile the totals from the Enumerator's abstract into a return for the circle (Form No. 15), make a list of the books by blocks, checking his list with the original block lists and the Register No. C of forms issued, pack the books in serial order accordingly, and despatch the whole without delay to the Superintendent of the charge in which he is employed, who will at once send the parcels for his charge, to the Deputy Census Superintendent, Dewan's Office, Bangalore, certifying at the same time to the chief officer of the railway that he has done so.

CLASS B.—Travellers by Rail.

13. Station enumeration.—A special official called the Station Enumerator should be told off at each station to enumerate all persons taking tickets at that station, or alighting from a train during the night of the 1st March 1901. Persons about to travel usually arrive at a station some time before their train is due, and should, so far as possible, be enumerated by the Station Enumerator before they enter the train, each being provided with an enumeration pass to prevent his being enumerated again.

In the case of persons alighting from the train the Station Enumerator should first ask if they have been enumerated already, and if they produce enumeration passes or assert that they have been so counted, the Enumerator should accept the answer, and let them go by. If they say they have not, the Enumerator should fill up the schedule entries for each person in full and give him an enumeration pass, telling him to show it if any Enumerator offers to count him again.

14. Train enumeration : Civil population.—In the case of all 1st and 2nd class passengers, who are well acquainted with the English language, whether European or Native, and of Europeans and Eurasians travelling intermediate or 3rd class, or on duty with the train, household schedules in English should be distributed by the guard in charge of the train on the evening of the 1st March. The rest of the persons in the train will be enumerated by general schedules. All passengers found in the train at 6 A.M. on the 2nd March who cannot produce enumeration passes, or who otherwise do not appear to have been enumerated anywhere else, and all employés on duty with the train, must be counted at the first large station at which the train stops at or about that hour. A place should be chosen where the train is timed to stop for a sufficient period, which may, if necessary, be slightly prolonged. Enumeration passes need not be given on this occasion. The household schedules given the evening before to English-knowing 1st and 2nd class passengers and others who have not alighted during the night should be collected and examined by an intelligent official, who should also fill up the form or cause it to be filled up for those who have omitted to do so for themselves. He should finally see that the schedules thus collected are securely stitched into a cover together with the general schedules for the other passengers, thus forming a compact book of schedules for the train.

Where the local staff is insufficient for the speedy enumeration of passengers at this halt, a few clerks should be sent temporarily from another station. A plan of enumeration found effective on former occasions was for two Enumerators to enter a compartment as the train drew up, accompanied, if at night, by porters with lamps. Starting from opposite ends of the compartment, each enumerated all the persons on one side of the compartment. They then moved on to the next compartment, which had been locked till their arrival, and repeated the process, the compartment they had left being then unlocked and the passengers allowed to alight.

Travelling Enumerators may also be appointed to enumerate some of the passengers in each carriage at every halt until all are returned, when the next carriage will be taken up.

15. Train enumeration: Troops.—Troops travelling by rail on the night in question will be enumerated by their officers, and the return separately sent in. But the Native servants travelling with them should be enumerated with the rest of the persons in the train.

16. Provisional Totals.—For the purpose of the provisional totals, the station enumeration and train enumeration should be treated as constituting separate blocks within the circle (station) at which the enumeration takes place. That is to say, the schedules containing the result of each enumeration should be bound up in a cover, abstracted and included in the circle return, under the heading "station enumeration" or "train enumeration," as the case may be, after the numbered blocks.

General

17. Administration.—On all general arrangements connected with the Census, the Agent or Manager should consult with the First Assistant to the Resident in Mysore, Bangalore. In order that the arrangements may be carried out successfully, it is important that a register of the railway charges, circles and blocks in each district should be sent as soon as they are settled, and in any case by the end of December 1900, to the Provincial Census Superintendent, and also that the instructions given in paragraph 5 as to the territorial arrangement of Census Divisions should be strictly followed.

18. Indents.—The indents for forms should be sent in Form No. B annexed, by the chief officer of the railway to the Superintendent of Mysore State Census, Bangalore. It should be stated in the column of Remarks in what language (English or Canarese) the general schedules are to be supplied at each station or premises.

On the basis of this indent, which can be tested by comparison with the particulars shown in the Census Register, the Provincial Superintendent will supply for the Census of residents (columns 4 to 7 of Form No. B):—

(a) household schedules at the rate of two for each family;
(b) general schedules at the rate of one page for each house;
(c) block lists at the rate of two per block;

plus 10 per cent. for spoilage.

For the Census of travellers (columns 8 to 12 of Form No. B) the requirements of each station should be based on the average number of passengers passing through the station on the 1st March for the last three years, with special extra provision for the station where the train enumeration under paragraph 14 is to take place.

The full supply of schedules and books, class A for residents and class B for travellers by rail, together with a supply of enumeration passes for passengers, should be indented for by 10th January 1901 at the latest, and should be prepared for household distribution and use by Enumerators respectively by the 25th of January 1901.

19. Expenses.—The schedules, passes and books will be supplied by Government. The agency employed will be chiefly officially attached to the railway. Unavoidable extra expenditure, such as payment for overtime on the night of the 1st March, remuneration of outsiders where no officials are available as Enumerators, charges for oil and petty stationery, may be entered in a bill under the above heads, and sent to the Superintendent, Mysore State Census, Bangalore.

Instructions for filling up Form A.

Column 1.—Enter a serial number for all stations and premises, each of which (unless extensive enough to be made a charge) will be treated as a circle for railway purposes.

Column 2.—Enter name of station, adding the letter S, or name and description of premises, such as workshops, coal mine, etc.

Column 3.—In the case of barracks, coolie lines, etc., each dwelling place having a separate independent entrance from the common way should be treated as a separate house.

Columns 4 and 5.—The entries will be of use in estimating the number of schedules required.

Column 6.—Ordinarily the station or premises will form the circle, and the station-master or the officer in chief executive charge of the premises will be the Supervisor. If any station or premises should be large enough to form a charge comprising several circles, the circles should be entered with the name of the Supervisor appointed to each in this column, thus: No. 1 Circle.—John Jones, Station-master.

At every small stations the same officer can probably do the work of Supervisor and Enumerator.

Column 7.—One Enumerator should be provided for each block, and one or more, according to the size of the station, to serve as Station Enumerators on the night of the 1st March 1901. Natives of India should be enumerated by Natives, who will be best able to deal with the entries relating to religion, caste, occupation and language. It is advisable to provide a reserve of Enumeraters to fill vacancies caused by illness.

Column 8.—In forming blocks the point to be considered is the number of houses for which the Enumerator can reasonably be expected to complete the final enumeration between about 7 P. M. and midnight on the 1st March 1901. If the houses lie tolerably close together, an Enumerator can deal with about 50; if they are scattered, the number in the block must be reduced.

Column 9.—See definition of "Charge," which practically corresponds with the sections prescribed for accident returns. As the statistics have to be compiled by districts or states, it is important that charges should be allotted in strict accordance with the definition. The name of the civil district which constitutes the charge should be carefully entered in this column.

Column 10.—The officer selected as Charge Superintendent must be in a position to exercise effective control over the Supervisors, to [illegible] portion of it personally.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ENUMERATORS.

I.—PROCEDURE.

1. As soon as you receive this book, obtain from the Supervisor of your circle the list of the buildings in your block, and from that fill up completely the "block list" stitched at the end of the book.

2. Fill up also the headings of the block list and of all the pages in the book, and enter the particulars of the book on the left of this page of the cover. Your Supervisor will show you how to do this.

3. Next, beginning on the 10th January in villages, and the 14th of February in towns, make the Preliminary Enumeration of your block as follows.

4. Get sufficient plain paper and rule it into columns similar to those in the schedules in this book. Then read carefully the instructions printed below and the specimen schedule printed on the third page of the cover of this book.

5. Next visit all the houses mentioned in your block list in the order in which they are entered therein and write down on the plain paper, in strict accordance with the printed instructions, all the particulars required by the schedules for all persons who ordinarily live in and take their meals from the house and are likely to be there on the night of the 1st March. Thus, persons temporarily away from the house in the fields, etc., or absent from the village for a few days for a marriage, etc., should be entered, while visitors who will have gone away by the 1st March should not be entered.

6. Use black ink; write very clearly; write all the entries in full, never using abbreviations, or the word "ditto," or making dots. If you have doubt in any case as to what should be written, ask your Supervisor for instructions.

7. Show your Supervisor your entries on the plain paper, and, when he has approved them, copy them into this book. When so copying them, remember that, after you have written down all the entries relating to any house, you should leave one space blank before making the entries for the next house. (See the Specimen Schedule.)

8. You must finish the above work before the 25th of January in villages and before the 20th February in towns.

9. At lamp-lighting time on the evening of the 1st March* make the Final Enumeration as follows.

10. Take this book with you, and first of all visit any cartstand† or halting place which there may be in your block, and ascertain if any travellers are present at it. If any are present, turn to the last of the entries already made in the book, leave one space blank, and then fill in in red ink, all particulars required by the schedules for those persons, and give each of them an enumeration ticket telling them to show it to any person who wishes to enumerate them again.

11. Then visit again every house in your block in the order in which it is entered in this book. If it is marked "empty," you should visit it nevertheless, to see if any one is then present in it.

12. At each house, summon the chief member of each family and read over to him, one by one, the names of his family entered in column 3 of the schedule, asking him as you read each name whether that person is present in the house or not.

13. You must consider as present all persons living in or taking their meals from the house, even though any of them may be absent for the night watching crops or channels or carrying on any out-door occupation or duty.

14. If any persons so read out are absent, strike out, in red ink, all the entries in the schedule relating to them, and not only those in column 3.

15. Next, ask the chief member of the family whether any person is present in the house besides those whose names have been read out. If any is, turn as before to the last entry in this book, and leave one space blank; then write in column 1 the number of that house with the word "continued" after it, and then fill up, in red ink, all the columns in the schedule for the person or persons newly present.

16. Do not alter in any way the entries in the schedules relating to persons who are present.

17. Having thus visited all the houses, ascertain whether any wandering gang of Erikalas, Koravas or Lambádis, etc., has camped in your block, and if there is any such, go and enumerate the members of it in the same manner.

18 When you have enumerated all the persons in your block, and not until then, fill in the serial numbers for them in column 2 of all the schedules.

19. If there are any European or Eurasian householders in your block who have been given household schedules, you should go and collect these on the morning of the 2nd March, and, after seeing that they are correctly filled in, should stitch them into this book next after the last schedule in it which has been filled up.

20. On the same morning, you should meet your Supervisor at the place agreed upon, and, after he has inspected your book, should fill up, under his instructions, the abstract printed on the inside of the cover. When you have done this correctly, he will take charge of your book and your duties will be finished.

21. According to the Census Act, every person is legally bound to furnish you with such information as is necessary for filling up the schedule; but you are forbidden to ask for any information not required for the purposes of the census, as for instance, the amount of any person's income. Any enumerator detected in extorting money on any pretext connected with the census renders himself liable to punishment under the Census Act or the Penal Code.

II.—Rules for filling up the Schedule.

Remember that in the case of every person enumerated columns 2—8 and 12—14 must invariably have an entry made in them, and that there must also always be an entry in at least one of the three columns numbered 9, 10 and 11.

* When the census is taken on the morning of the 2nd March, the enumerator should begin the Final Census at 6 A.M.

† Where the census is taken on the morning of the 2nd March, the cart-stands, etc., should be visited in this manner on the night of the 1st March.

Column 1 (Census number of house).—Enter the census number marked on the house. If the house is empty, write "empty" after the number and leave one space blank.

Column 2 (Serial number).—Do not fill up this column until the Final Census is completed (see paragraph 18 above); then enter a serial number for all persons enumerated in the book.

Column 3 (Name).—Enter first the name of the chief resident member of the family, whether male or female; then that of every other person living in, or taking his meals from, the house, including resident servants, if any. If an infant has not yet been named, write the word "infant" in this column. If any objection be made to giving the name of a female, write the word "female." (In both these cases fill up the other columns as usual.) Do not insist upon any female giving her own or her husband's name.

For example, if the person be a Musalman, state whether he is a Shekh, Saiyad, Pathan, Labbai, or Mappilla: if he belongs to a hill tribe, give the name of the tribe, as Khond Irula, Toda, Kurumba. If he be a Christian, enter his race, e.g., English, Eurasian, Armenian, Native Christian, etc. Similarly, if he be a Buddhist, state whether he is a Burman, or Chinese, etc.

Columns 9 and 10 (Occupations of actual workers).—These are only to be filled up in the case of persons who actually do work or carry on business, whether personally or by means of servants, or who live on private property, such as pension, rent from houses or land, etc. For those who do not work and have no property of their own, they will be blank. If the person be an actual worker, whether male or female, enter in column 9 the exact nature of the occupation or means of livelihood upon which he principally depends, and if he has two or more occupations or means of livelihood, enter in column 10 the exact nature of the next most important one. Column 11 (Means of subsistence of dependents).—If the person be an actual worker regarding whose occupation particulars have already been given in column 9, this column should be blank. RULES FOR FILLING UP THE GENERAL SCHEDULE.

Rule 1.—Before taking charge of the Book of Schedule forms for a Block, see that the headings, namely, name of Hobli and Taluk or Sub-Taluk, names and numbers respectively of Village, Circle and Block, are duly entered on the top of the 1st page at least. You should write them all also on the subsequent pages.

Next enter the number of the house painted for Census purposes. If no person is living in it, write "Empty" after the number, and next enter the number of the occupied house you are going to enumerate. If you find a house without a number in which some one is living, you will report the case at once to the Supervisor, and in the meantime adopt a fractional number intermediate between the number last written and the next in the series, thus 56½ for a house between No. 56 and No. 57.

Rule 2. Column 1.—This column is not to be filled up until the final record has been completed. You will then enter a serial number for all persons enumerated in the Block.

Rule 3 Column 2.—Enter first the chief resident member of the family, whether male or female, then the other members of the family and their resident servants if any, prefixing in each case a catchword denoting relationship, etc., for the sake of identification or distinction between two or more persons bearing the same name in the house, thus "wife Lingamma," "son Mudda," "daughter Kempi," "aunt Lingamma," "servant Rama," and so forth. If there be any objection made to giving the name of a female, write the word "Female" in this column filling up the rest of the columns for her as usual. If an infant has not yet been named, enter the word "Infant." You are not to insist upon any female giving her own or her husband's name. When you have entered all the persons in a house, you should leave the remainder of the page blank and begin making the entries for the next house on a fresh page.

Rule 4. Column 3.—Enter here each person as either male or female, even though you have written the word "Female" in column 2 already. Enter eunuchs as male.

Rule 5. Column 4.—Enter the age on last birthday that is, the number of years each person has completed. For infants less than one year old, enter the word "Infant."

If a person cannot state his or her age exactly, you should ask the relations or refer to some well-known event of local importance, or if the person be present, make a guess at the age from the appearance.

Rule 6. Columns 5 to 8.—Enter each person of whatever age and sex as whether never married, or now married, or at one time married, but now widowed or widowered.

If never married, enter a × in column 5.

If married and the wife or husband (as the case may be) is alive, enter in column 6 whether it is the first, second or third marriage, and in column 7 the age of the person when his or her first marriage was performed.

If the person has lost the wife or husband, whether by death or divorce, enter in column 8 the age of that person when such loss occurred.

[NOTE.—Thus in the case of those who were married before the last Census of 1891 and have their wives or husbands now living, and also in the case of those who lost their wives or husbands before the last Census of 1891, the entries in columns 8 and 9 will be the same now as at the Census of 1891.]

Rule 7. Column 9.—Enter the District in which each person was born and if the person was not born in the Mysore State, and the name of the Province to the District of birth. Thus, "Tumkur District," or "Kanara District," "Madras Presidency," as the case may be. If the person was born out of India, enter the country, as China, Afghanistan, Ceylon. The names of villages, taluks, etc., are not to be given.

Rule 8. Columns 10 and 11.—Enter in column 10 the main religion to which each person belongs, as "Hindu," "Mussalman," "Jain," "Christian," "Parsi," "Budhist," etc. For a member of a Forest Tribe who does not call himself Hindu, Mussalman or of any other religion, enter the name of his tribe, as "Kuruba," "Soliga," "Korama," "Koracha," etc.

In column 11 enter the sect of religion followed by each person, such as Sunny, Shiya, Dayara, etc., for Mussalmans; Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, Lutheran, etc., for Christians; Shivaite, Vaishnavaite, Lingayita, etc., for Hindus.

In the case of Hindus worshipping mattas, the sect may be denoted by the matta worshipped if it has no other name.

For Srivaishnava Brahmans (Iyengars), state also whether the person is of the Tengalai or Vadaghale sect.

For Smartha Brahmans who follow the "Bhagavatsampradayem" persuasion, enter the word "Bhagavatsampradayem."

If the sect cannot be stated, enter "Not told" in this column 11, but do not leave it blank.

Rule 9. Columns 12 and 13.—These columns are intended for the caste of Hindus and Jains, the tribe of those who have no caste distinctions among them, and the race of Christians, Buddhists, etc.

In column 12 enter the main caste of Hindus and Jains, and the main race or tribe of others.

For Example:—For Hindus you should enter in column 12 the caste such as "Brahman," "Kshatriya," "Komati," "Nagaratha," "Ladar," "Lingayita," "Vakkaliga," "Moodali," "Panchala," "Golla," "Kuruba," "Beda," "Banajiga," "Wadda," "Holaya," "Madiga," and so on. The vague and general terms "Vaisya" and "Sudra" being useless, and in some cases even disliked, should not be used. For Jains you should enter in column 12 "Digambara," "Sevetambara," etc.

For Mussalmans you should enter in column 12 such as "Pathan," "Mogul," "Labbe," etc.

For Christians you should enter in column 12 the nationality, such as English, Irish, German in the case of foreigners, and any racial or caste distinctions which may be returned among Indian Christians.

In column 13 enter the sub-division of caste or tribe if any such be returned.

In the case of Brahmans and others who may return the same, add the Gotram and Sakha. (By Sakha is meant the particular Veda—Rig, Yejis or Sama—to which each Brahman adheres.) In the case of any caste, such as Vakkaligas, Besthers, etc., among whom the distinction of 18 or 9 Phanas sometimes exists, add "18 Phanas," or "9 Phanas," or "No Phanas," as may be returned by the persons concerned.

For example, in the case of Brahmans, enter here the sub-divisions if any as "Muriknad," "Brahacharana," "Badaganad," etc., and add "Bharadvaja," "Kasyapa," "Visvamitra," etc., as the case may be for Gotra; and "Rigvedi," "Yejurvedi," and "Samavedi," as the case may be for Sakha.

In the case of Kshatriyas, enter whether "Arasu," "Koomarpatta," "Rajput," "Rachewar," etc.

In the case of Komatis, enter whether "Kannada," "Myada," "Setti," "Yayvamanta," etc.

In the case of Nagaratas, enter whether "Namdari," "Sivachar," etc.

In the case of Banajigas, enter whether "Nayadu," "Setti," "Telugu," etc.

In the case of Bedas, enter whether "Nayika," "Machi," "Pallegar," etc.

In the case of Vakkaligas enter "Gangadikar," "Morasu," "Halepaiki," "Kunchatiga," "Rodguara," etc., and add "18 Phanas," or "No Phanas," as the case may be.

In the case of Lingayets, enter "Aradhya," "Jangam," "Banajiga," "Panchachara Gowda," "Gowdamane," etc.

In the case of Panchalas, enter "Achari," "Akkasale," "Badagi," "Kammara," "Kanchugara," etc.

In the case of Tigalas, enter "Ulli," "Palli," "Vanne," etc., and add "18 Phanas," or "9 Phanas," or "No Phanas," as the case may be.

In the case of Holayas, enter "Morasu," "Kanga," "Maggada," "Tigala," etc.

In the case of Kurubas, enter whether "Bevina," "Byalatha," "Hain," "Hale," "Halli," "Ane," "Birappana Vakkalu," etc.

In the case of Waddas, enter whether "Bailu," "Boyi," "Kallu," "Mannu," etc.

Some races or castes may not return sub-divisions, and in their case enter "Not told" in column 13. But do not leave it blank.

Rule 10. Columns 14, 15 and 16.—The next three columns, namely, 14, 15 and 16 relate to the occupation or means of subsistence of the persons of whatever age or sex entered in the Schedule.

Columns 14 and 15 relate to the persons male and female who do work and earn a livelihood or live on private property such as pension, house-rent, etc. These columns should therefore be left blank in the case of dependents.

Column 16 relates to dependents and should therefore be left blank in the case of Actual Workers or persons of independent means already disposed of in columns 14 and 15. If a person be temporarily out of employment (say for the six months past before the Census), enter the last or ordinary occupation.

You should therefore first of all determine by suitable enquiry whether the person whose particulars you are writing should be treated as independent and entered in columns 14 and 15, or as dependent and entered in column 16.

For example, children who actually do work and earn wages, and women who earn money by occupations in which the husbands do not take part such as selling firewood, butter-milk, cow-dung cakes, or grass or by rice-pounding, weaving, or doing house-work for wages, should be shown under those occupations in columns 14 and 15. But women and children who do not carry on any such occupation should be entered in column 16 in the manner which will be presently explained.

In entering occupation, you should enter it exactly. Do not use vague terms such as Service Government Service, Shop-keeping, Trade, Writing, Labor and so forth, but state the exact service, the goods sold in the shop, the class of articles the person is trading in, the class of writing or labor, and so forth.

A seller who makes the articles he sells should be entered as "maker and seller" of them.

When a person is in the service of a public body, enter the name of that body before the service, thus Railway Guard, Government Clerk, Municipal Sweeper etc.

When a person is an agriculturist, that is, lives on land (zerayet), enter also whether he is owner (Hiduvalidar) or lessee (Guttigedar) or cultivating ryot (Saguvali Shikmidar).

Bearing these instructions in mind, enter in column 14 the principal occupation or means of livelihood of all persons of whatever age or sex who actually do work or carry on business whether personally or by means of servants, or who live on private property such as house-rent, pension, etc. As already stated, the column will be blank for dependents.

In column 15 (subsidiary occupation of Actual Workers) enter the occupations, if any, which actual workers or possessors of private property pursue in addition to their principal occupation. If they have no such additional occupation, enter in this column the word "None." As already stated, this column also will be blank for dependents.

In column 16 (means of subsistence of dependents), for those who do not work or carry on business either personally or by means of servants, enter the principal occupation of the person who supports them. As already stated, the column will be blank for actual workers or livers on private property.

Rule 11. Column 17.—Enter the language which each person mentions as his mother language, i. e., that which he ordinarily uses in conversation with his mother or other near relations.

Rule 12. Column 18.—For all persons of whatever age or sex who can both read and write any language, enter in this column the name of the language which they can so read and write. If they know more than one language, first enter the language best known and then the rest. If illiterate, that is, if the person does not know both to read and write any language at all, or knows only to sign his (or her) name, enter a pair of (00) in this column.

Rule 13. Column 19.—If the person knows both to read and write the English language, enter "Yes" in this column. If not, enter "No." Knowing merely to sign one's name in English will not be sufficient for entering "Yes."

Rule 14. Column 20.—If any person be blind of both eyes, or deaf and dumb from birth, or insane, or suffering from corrosive leprosy, enter the name of the infirmity in this column. Do not enter those who are blind of one eye only, or who have become deaf and dumb after birth, or who are suffering from white leprosy only.

Rule 15.—Read the above instructions carefully, and in any case of doubt or difficulty, seek your Supervisor's instructions, and be guided by them.

Standard Questions to be asked by the Census Officer who fills up the Schedules.

The questions given below indicate the main points on which enquiries are to be made but the instructions and rules must be carefully studied before the Enumerator begins his task, so that if the answers first given to these questions do not contain all the information required according to the rules, additional questions must be asked until the answers furnish that information.

TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Simla, the 22nd May, 1900.

TELEGRAMS FOR THE TROOPS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

No. 9.—The following revised notification is published for general information :—

Until further notice, State and Private telegrams in plain language addressed to persons serving with the Field Force in South Africa will be accepted at Sender's risk, and charged for at the rate of R1-8 per word from offices in India or Burma. Telegrams in Code or Cypher cannot be accepted at this reduced rate. The address should consist of the following :—

(1) The name, or number, or both of the person to whom the telegram is addressed (in the case of officers the rank may be omitted, and in the case of telegrams for Non-Commissioned Officers and men the name may, in like manner, be omitted if the number is given. Such omissions, however, add to the risk of the telegram going astray, more especially when addressed to Non-Commissioned Officers and men), and

(2) The Regiment (this will be counted and charged for as one word irrespective of the number of words used).

These telegrams should be addressed "Bombay for South Africa" (which words will be signalled free), and not to any particular Telegraph Office in South Africa. The Bombay Telegraph Office will forward them to the Officer Commanding at Capetown, who will deliver them to the Addressees at whatever place in South Africa they may be stationed.

Senders of telegrams should accurately describe the Regiment, Battalion, Battery or Corps, to which the Addressees are attached, as it appears in the "Army List." For example : the address of an Officer or Private in the "Rifles" should give the number of the Battalion, and make it quite clear whether it is a Battalion of the "Rifle Brigade," the "King's Royal Rifle Corps," the "Royal Irish Rifles," or the "Scottish Rifles (Cameronians)."

The reduced rate will also apply to telegrams addressed to members of the Nursing Staff serving in South Africa, and any telegrams addressed to a Nurse will be treated in the same way as those intended for soldiers and sailors.

Telegrams for officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men in South Africa who are known to be suffering from wounds or sickness may be addressed to them as if they were with their regiment or corps. Such telegrams, on arrival at the place where the regiment or corps is stationed, will be redirected to the proper hospital.

When, however, the name of the hospital is known to the sender of the message, he may address the telegram direct to that hospital, e.g., "Field Hospital, 1st Cavalry Brigade," or to "No. 2 General Hospital" or to "Mooi River Hospital."

In any case, the telegram should, as already stated, be addressed by the sender to "Bombay for South Africa," which words will not be charged for.

The following are given as examples of addresses and counting :—

"Captain Armstrong, 64th Royal Field Artillery, Bombay for South Africa" (three words) ; "Captain Armstrong, Wynberg Hospital, Bombay for South Africa" (three words) ; "7303 Murphy, 2nd Battalion, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, Bombay for South Africa" (three words) ; "7303, Mooi River Hospital, Bombay for South Africa" (two words).

II. Notification No. 5, dated the 8th May, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

The 5th December, 1900.

No. 37.—The British Government announces that the transmission of Private telegrams for the Orange River Colony and the Transvaal, vid Cape Colony and Natal, is now suspended.

Telegrams for Pretoria, Johannesburg, Vereeniging, Germiston, Middelburg, Heidelberg, and Standerton are, meanwhile, being accepted for transmission, vid Lourenco Marques, at the usual rates. These telegrams should be written in plain English, and will be accepted only at the risk of the sender. They are also subject to censorship and to delay in transmission.

Calcutta, the 13th December, 1900.

No. 39.—The following revised notification is published for general information :—

The Post Master-General, London, announces that the British Government have decided to suspend at Aden and the Cape of Good Hope the transmission of all telegrams in code or cipher, whether of foreign Governments or private persons, to or from British Central Africa, St. Helena and Ascension. Code messages for the following places, viz., Cape Colony, Natal, Rhodesia, Zanzibar, Seychelles, Mauritius, Madagascar, British and German East Africa, Mozambique and Lourenço Marques may, however, be accepted, if the words used are in one, or other, of the following Code Books, which have been deposited with the authorities at Aden, viz. :—

(1) A B C (4th edition).
(3) Scott's (9th edition).
(4) A 1.
(5) Telegraphenschlüessel of W. Staudt and O. Hundius (published by Julius Springer at Berlin).
(6) The Mercury Code (2nd edition), enlarged and revised, with the First Supplement.
(7) Broomhall's Comprehensive Cipher Code.
(8) Western Union Telegraphic Code and International Cable Directory, Universal Edition, 1900.

(12) International Mercantile Telegraph Code (Meyer), 1880.

(13) The General, Commercial and Mining Telegram Code, 1897, by C. A. Moreing and F. C. McCutcheon.

Telegrams should be endorsed to the effect that the words used actually represent the corresponding expressions given in the abovenamed Code Books.

As delays occur at Aden in consequence of the difficulty of determining which code has been employed, senders of telegrams to the abovenamed places in East Africa should write on the message draft the name of the code employed. For instance A B C; A Z; Scott's; A 1; Staudt; Mercuur; Broomhall's; Directory; Atlantic, 1898; Atlantic, 1900; Watkins; Meyer; or McCutcheon. This information will be included in the "Official Instructions" and transmitted free of charge.

II. Notification No. 36, dated the 29th November, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

No. 39-A.—In the event of the establishment in British India of a censorship over telegrams, the first twelve Code Books mentioned in Notification No. 39, dated the 13th of December, 1900, will be used in India for purposes similar to that for which they are employed in Aden.

The public are recommended to provide themselves with such of the codes as may appear suited to their requirements.

X of 1889. Amendment of section 6, Act X, 1889.

2. (1) For clause (p) of sub-section (1) of section 6 of the Indian Ports Act, 1889, the following shall be substituted, namely :—

"(p) with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, for the establishment and regulation of places to be used as sanitaria for the segregation or as hospitals for the treatment of persons who are or have recently been suffering from any dangerous infectious or contagious disease, and for regulating the action, including the disposal of dead bodies, to be taken—

(i) where a vessel on which there is any case of dangerous infectious or contagious disease common in India, enters or is in any such port;

(ii) where a vessel on which there is any case of dangerous infectious or contagious disease uncommon in India, enters or is in any such port;

(iii) where a vessel on which there has been any case of dangerous infectious or contagious disease or any death within twelve days previous to the arrival of the vessel at such port, enters or is in any such port;

(iv) where a vessel enters any such port from a port in which, or in the neighbourhood of which, there is believed to be, or to have been at the time when the vessel left such port, any dangerous infectious or contagious disease uncommon in India;

(v) where a vessel enters any such port having on board any person transhipped from a vessel coming from a port in which or in the neighbourhood of which there is believed to be or to have been at the time when such last-mentioned vessel left such last-mentioned port any dangerous infectious or contagious disease uncommon in India;

(vi) where there is a dead body on board a vessel in any such port;

(vii) where there are on board a vessel in any such port food-stuffs which, owing to decomposition or for any other reason, are, in the opinion of the Health Officer, unfit for human consumption; or (viii) where a vessel leaves any such port while there is in the port or in its neighbourhood any dangerous infectious or contagious disease uncommon in India.

For the purposes of this clause only such diseases shall be deemed to be dangerous infectious or contagious diseases, or diseases common or uncommon in India, as the Governor General in Council may by order direct."

(2) After sub-section (2) of the same section the following sub-sections shall be inserted, namely :-

(3) If any person disobeys any rule made under clause (p) of sub-section (1), he shall be punished for every such offence with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

(4) If a master fails wholly or in part to do any act prescribed by any rule made under clause (p) of sub-section (1), the Health Officer shall cause such act to be done, and the reasonable expenses incurred in doing such act shall be recoverable by him from such master."

our amended Bill, we have proposed the incorporation of the provisions of the Emigrants' Health Bill with those of the Assam Labour and Emigration Bill, which latter Bill will thus provide for the health, supervision and control of assisted emigrants, as well as of contract labourers, when proceeding to the labour-districts. At present these matters are dealt with by two sets of provisions, namely, in the case of contract labourers by the provisions of the Assam Labour and Emigration Act, 1882 (I of 1882), and of the rules made thereunder, and in the case of assisted emigrants by the rules made under the Inland Emigrants' Health Act, 1889 (Bengal Act I of 1889). We can see no reason why this somewhat confusing state of the law should be continued, or why the transport of both classes of emigrants should not be dealt with in one Act, the more especially when that Act will regulate to some extent the conditions under which assisted emigration may take place (see Chapter V of Bill annexed). The various alterations in the Labour and Emigration Bill which this expansion of its provisions entails are explained in the notes on the clauses of that Bill which appear below.

3. All the modifications of any importance proposed by us in the Labour and Emigration Bill are noted in the following statement, in which, for convenience of reference, the clauses referred to are arranged under the different chapters. The clauses cited are the clauses of the revised Bill appended to the Report.

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Clause 2.—The definition of "agent" is taken from the Health Bill with certain drafting modifications necessary to adapt it to the provisions of this Bill. The definitions of "garden-sardar" and "recruiting-district" are new. The reason for the former definition is given in the note on clause 56, infra. We have also provided for cases in which persons are unable to write by declaring that in such cases "sign" and "signature" shall include finger-impressions.

Clause 3.—We have slightly expanded the last words of the first paragraph of this clause so as to enable the Local Government to prohibit emigration otherwise than in accordance with certain specified provisions of the Act in order to make the power conferred more elastic. It has been pointed out that the effect of the issue of a notification under this clause prohibiting recruitment for emigration to a labour-district, either absolutely or otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of the Act, might be to cause inconvenience to the employers of labour in such district unless due notice is given. We have, therefore, added a proviso to sub-clause (1) declaring that a notification under the clause shall not take effect until the expiry of six months from the date of its publication, unless for any special reason the Local Government thinks it necessary to direct that it shall take effect at an earlier date. Our intention by these last words is to give the Local Government power to deal exceptionally with cases in which, owing to political or other reasons, a postponement of the operation of the notification for six months would be inexpedient.

CHAPTER II.

LABOUR-CONTRACTS GENERALLY.

Clause 5.—We have proposed some important amendments in sub-clause (4) of this clause which in the Bill as introduced required every labour-contract to stipulate for a minimum monthly wage throughout the period of contract for a completed daily task of not less than six rupees in the case of a man and five rupees in the case of a woman, in lieu of the existing minimum wage of five rupees in the case of a man and four rupees in the case of a woman for the first three years, and six rupees in the case of a man and five in that of a woman for the fourth year. After very careful consideration of the question in all its bearings, we have come to the conclusion that, though some increase in the present minimum wage is desirable in the interest of labourers, the increase proposed in the Bill as introduced would, if adopted, impose an excessive burden on employers. The newly joined labourer needs special protection, as he is often unable for some months after his first employment, owing to his weakly condition and want of skill, to complete the daily task allotted to him, and therefore to earn the minimum wage prescribed by the present law. To meet such cases we have proposed in our amended sub-clause that all such labourers should be entitled, unless the Inspector certifies that they are physically fit to perform a whole task, to receive full wages for the performance of a half task during the first six months of their contracts. With this concession we think that the present minimum rate of wage may be maintained for the first year. We think, however, that labourers are justly entitled to claim some increase of wage in the second and third years, and we have proposed that this should be eight annas a month, so that male labourers will draw Rs. 5-8 and female labourers Rs. 4-8 in those years and the present maximum wage of six and five rupees respectively in their fourth year.

Clause 9, proviso.—We have recast this proviso so as to render a woman incapable of binding herself by a labour-contract if her husband or lawful guardian, if any, objects. We consider that in this form the proviso is not open to the practical objections which were taken to it in its original form, when the consent of the husband or guardian was required in every case, while it will go a long way towards removing the scandal caused by the recruitment of lone women without the knowledge of their husbands or guardians.

Clause 11.—We have expanded the last words of the clause so as to make them provide for cases in which two or more estates belonging to the same owner are in charge of the same employer.

Clause 12.—We have, at the suggestion of the Chief Commissioner of Assam, widened this clause so as to make it clear that it covers the expenses of temporary detention as well as those connected with the actually sending back of the persons repatriated.

We have recast sub-clauses (a), (b) and (c) of this clause on lines proposed by the Tezpur Conference [whose proceedings are recorded in the papers accompanying the letter from the Chief Commissioner of Assam, No. 51-T., dated 25th December, 1900 (Papers No. 5)] for the reasons given by the Chief Commissioner of Assam, who supports these proposals of the Conference. We have also adopted a new sub-clause (2) proposed by the Conference, which provides for the recovery by the employer from the contractor of the amount of any sum which may have been recovered from the former, and have added a further sub-clause making a certified copy of the order of the Local Government under clause 10 or clause 11 and the receipt granted to the employer for the expenses paid by him conclusive evidence of the title of the employer to recover such expenses from the contractor.

CHAPTER III.

RECRUITMENT BY CONTRACTORS, SUB-CONTRACTORS AND RECRUITERS.

Clause 14.—In order to emphasize the importance of character in the selection of contractors and sub-contractors, we have specifically limited the Superintendent's power of licensing the same to persons fitted by character to act as contractors or sub-contractors. We have also inserted a like limitation in clause 25 which relates to recruiters.

Clause 21.—In order to prevent labourers being received into a contractor's depôt at a distance from the place where they were recruited, we have added words to this clause permitting depôts to be maintained for specific local areas only.

Clause 22.—To meet a suggestion of the North-Western Provinces Government, we have omitted the word "District" before "Magistrate" in sub-clause (2) of this clause, thus empowering Sub-divisional Magistrates to supervise depôts.

Clause 29.—The object of our alteration in this clause is to specify more clearly than was done in the Bill as introduced the Magistrate by whom a recruiter's license must be countersigned.

Clause 34.—We have adopted sub-clauses (1) and (2) of this clause as they stood in the Bill as introduced. One of our Hon'ble colleagues (the Hon'ble Mr. Cotton) was, however, desirous of amending them so as to require the Registering-officer to satisfy himself, not only as to the identity of every person brought before him for registration, but, further, that he had been recruited within the area to which the recruiter's license extends. Though the Hon'ble Member attached great importance to these amendments, we were unable to accept them, as they did not appear to us to be either necessary or practicable, while they tended in our opinion to hamper recruitment.

Sub-clauses (3) and (4) are new. Their object is to prescribe the procedure to be followed when women are brought before the Registering-officer for registration under this Chapter. They provide a safeguard in the case of this class of labourers in addition to that contained the proviso to clause 9, which we have noticed above.

Clause 40.—The object of our redraft of sub-clause (1) of this clause is to make it clear, in cases in which a contractor has more than one depôt, to which of those depôts a labourer who has been registered must be conveyed by the recruiter.

Clause 44.—In accordance with a suggestion made at the Tezpur Conference, we have substituted for the word "recruited" in the proviso to this clause the words and figures "registered under section 34, sub-section (2)," in order to make it clear that, except when another place is directed by the Local Government, the labour-contract must be executed in the district of registration.

Clause 46.—We have inserted words in this clause directly empowering the employer or his agent to select the medical man who is to make the further medical examination provided for in the clause, and we have assimilated the terms of the certificate to be given by such medical men to those prescribed for medical certificates in the case of persons recruited by garden-sardars in clause 73.

Clause 47.—We have expanded the latter part of this clause so as to provide for cases in which special agreements for fees may be made with the medical officer employed to conduct the examination referred to in clause 46.

Clause 54.—We have omitted from this clause the words providing for the payment of interest on sums which contractors are required to pay under the immediately preceding clauses, and have also omitted the similar words which occur in other clauses, as the amounts involved are very trifling and the facility for the recovery of sums due under the Act given by clause 215 of the Bill as introduced is so great that it does not seem necessary now to take any account of interest either here or elsewhere in the Bill.

Clause 55.—In order to make the provisions of this clause more precise we have substituted the words "place where they are to labour" for the words "labour-district," and we have added a provision, on the analogy of that contained in clause 40, which relates to conveyance of labourers to depôt, requiring the person who accompanies labourers from a depôt to a labour-district to hold a certificate of fitness from the Superintendent of Emigration.

CHAPTER IV.

RECRUITMENT OF GARDEN-SARDARS AND LOCAL AGENTS.

Clause 56.—In order, as far as possible, to prevent the employment of arkatis and other unlicensed recruiters as "garden-sardars," we have inserted a definition of this term in clause 2 of the Bill, by which it is limited to persons employed on any estate and deputed by their employers to engage labourers under the Act. We have also added words to this clause empowering an employer to cancel a garden-sardar's certificate at any time.

Clause 59.—As an additional check in order to make sure that the person is a bonâ fide garden-sardar, we have inserted words in this clause requiring the Inspector or Magistrate to satisfy himself, as far as possible, before countersigning a garden-sardar's certificate, that the man is employed on the estate of which the person granting the certificate is in charge.

Clause 60.—We have, for the convenience of the parties concerned, added words to sub-clause (2) permitting a garden-sardar obtaining a fresh certificate to appear before any Magistrate specified in the notice sent him by the District Magistrate for the purpose of accepting and signing such fresh certificate in his presence.

Clause 61.—In order to remove any obscurity as to the meaning, we have added words to the clause to make it clear that the countersignature from which the term of a garden-sardar's certificate is to run is that of the Magistrate or Inspector in the labour-district.

Clause 62.—We have modified sub-clause (2) and added a new sub-clause (3) with the object of limiting the powers of subordinate Magistrates to cases in which the District or Subdivisional Magistrate has expressly delegated to them his powers under the clause.

Clause 63.—We have redrafted this clause so as to make its provisions give effect more accurately than they appeared to us to do in the Bill as introduced to what is obviously the intention of the clause. We have also, in consequence of a suggestion made by the Government of Bengal, made provision in a new sub-clause (3) for the forwarding to their destinations of labourers who were in charge of garden-sardars whose certificates have been cancelled.

Clause 64.—We have made extensive alterations in this clause. In the first place we have made its provisions applicable to cases in which a local agent is to represent more than one employer and thus dispensed with clause 66 of the Bill as introduced. Then we have expressly limited the functions of local agents to matters connected with the supervision of garden-sardars under the chapter. Next we have, in accordance with the suggestion of the Tezpur Conference, provided that no person who in the opinion of the Superintendent has a share or interest in any contractor's business shall be licensed. Lastly we have included so much of clause 65 of the Bill as introduced as must be retained after the above amendments have been made as sub-clause (2) of this clause.

Clause 65 is new. It is intended to take the place of clauses 67 to 69 of the Bill as introduced, which provide for the direct recruitment of labourers by local agents in certain cases, a practice which experience has shown to be inimical to the interests of employers. It provides for a new class of agents, styled "selecting agents," who are to be licensed on the application of employers and whose duties are to be limited to the selection on behalf of the employers of labourers recruited by contractors. This new clause as it stands will, we are informed by our Hon'ble colleagues who represent their interests, provide for all that is required by the employers of labour in Assam, and, as the matter affects such employers exclusively, and there does not appear to us to be any objection on principle to the creation of such a class of agents, we recommend that the clause be adopted in lieu of clauses 67 to 69 of the Bill as introduced.

Clause 68.—We have added words to this clause to provide for such other Registering-officers as the Local Government may appoint for the area to bring the clause into conformity with clause 33 of the Bill as introduced.

Clause 72.—We have omitted the words in sub-clauses (1) and (4) postponing the execution of labour-contracts until the lapse of three days from the date of registration, as we see no reason for imposing this restriction, which does not exist in the present law, on recruitment by garden-sardars. In sub-clause (3) we have made slight drafting alterations.

Clause 74.—We have amended this clause so as to permit of private agreements in the same manner as we have proposed in the case of clause 47.

Clause 75.—We have substituted a reference to the place of entering into the labour-contract instead of one to the place of registration as in the Bill as introduced in the opening words of this clause and have made certain consequential alterations in the rest of the clause.

Clause 79.—Here again we have made a substitution of a similar nature to that noticed in the case of clause 75.

Clause 87.—We have on the suggestion of the Bengal Government generalised this clause which was specifically limited to Calcutta in the Bill as introduced, as it may hereafter be required elsewhere.

Clause 88.—The slight alterations we have proposed in this clause are unimportant and merely consequential on those made in the preceding clause.

Clause 89.—This clause is new. Its object is to provide for the recovery from the garden-sardar, or other person liable, of the cost of providing such escort for the return-journey of any labourer or other person concerning whom an order has been made under the immediately preceding clauses as the Magistrate may think necessary.

CHAPTER V.

ENGAGEMENT OF EMIGRANTS OTHERWISE THAN UNDER CHAPTERS III AND IV.

Clause 90.—We have suggested various alterations in this clause.

With the object of making it clear that the special procedure for engagement of emigrants through specially employed garden-sardars, for which this clause provides, can only be brought into operation after the issue of a notification under clause 3, we have prefixed words to the clause indicating that the Local Government can only issue a notification under the clause when a notification under clause 3, prohibiting emigration save in accordance with the provisions of the Act therein specified, has been published.

On the suggestion of the Chief Commissioner of Assam, we have required the permit for which sub-clause (a) provides to be in such form as the Local Government may direct, and we have added words to the same sub-clause prohibiting the grant of permits to garden-sardars who have not resided for six months on an estate.

In order to make the requirement of sub-clause (f) as to reporting himself more elastic, we have substituted, for the fixed period of three days of his arrival within which a garden-sardar must, under the Bill as introduced, report himself to the Magistrate, words enabling him to make such report any time before he engages persons to emigrate.

As in the corresponding provision regarding certificated garden-sardars (clause 63), we have limited the power of cancelling permits given by sub-clause (i) to District Magistrates, and we have added a provision requiring such Magistrate to give notice of the cancellation to the employer and the Inspector or Magistrate who countersigned the permit.

Clause 91.—We have slightly altered the opening words of the clause to give clearer effect to what we understand to be its object, namely, to permit of engagement of persons to emigrate in special cases by means of approved agencies or by associations of employers, and, in order to prevent the misapplication of sub-clause (a), we have specifically declared that the garden-sardars to which it refers must hold permits granted under clause 90.

As clause 95 of the Bill as introduced, which provides for the suspension, etc., of recruitment under the two last preceding clauses, seemed to us to be unnecessary, we have omitted it.

Clause 92 is a reproduction in a modified form of sub-clause (2) of clause 3 of the Bill. It legalizes, where no notification may have issued under clause 3, the engaging and assisting of persons to emigrate outside the preceding provisions of the proposed new law.

Clause 93 is new. It specifies the provisions of the Bill which alone are to apply in the case of persons engaged or assisted to emigrate outside the provisions of previous Chapters of the Bill. All these provisions already apply in such cases, but it is hoped that the specification of them in this manner in one clause may prevent doubts being raised as to the construction of the Act when it becomes law.

CHAPTER VI.

TRANSPORT.

Clause 94 is new. It is a general provision directing all persons who forward or accompany labourers or emigrants to follow the prescribed routes and to conform to the prescribed rules.

Clause 105.—We have added words to this clause to make it clear that it only refers to labourers in respect of whom way-bills are by law required. Otherwise we have made no addition to or alteration of the provisions of this chapter.

CHAPTER VII.

PROVISIONS AS TO THE LABOUR-DISTRICTS.

Clause 120.—In pursuance of a suggestion made by the Government of Bengal, we have inserted words in this clause which will make it necessary for the Inspector or Magistrate to consider any cause which may be shewn by the employer to the contrary before cancelling any labourer's contract.

Clause 122.—We have added words requiring the register which has to be kept under this clause to include the dependants of labourers and persons employed on an estate, an addition recommended by the Chief Commissioner of Assam.

Clause 125.—We have omitted sub-clause (2) which was repealed in the original Act I of 1882 by Act V of 1897 and was apparently re-inserted in the Bill as introduced by oversight, the weekly holiday being provided for in clause 124, sub-clause (3).

We have also added a new sub-clause (3) directing employers to pay their labourers the wages earned by them during the preceding month on or before the fifteenth day of each month, as we consider it unreasonable that labourers should be kept waiting for their wages for a longer period.

Clause 136.—We have added words to sub-clause (1) so as to make the reference which was inserted in the Bill as introduced to rules under section 134 more complete.

Clause 137.—We have made some slight drafting alterations in the latter part of this clause, as we understand that it is almost invariably "practicable" to appoint employers of labour to be members of committees summoned under this clause.

Clause 140.—On the suggestion of our Hon'ble Colleagues (Messrs. Buckingham and Henderson) we have expanded sub-clause (3) of this clause so as to make it clear that it requires labourers, who have been released from their obligation to labour on an estate declared unfit for the residence of labourers, to labour on any other estate belonging to the same owner or in charge of the same employer in the same labour-district. We think that it is unreasonable to limit such estates, as would appear to be the case under the existing law, to those in charge of the same employer.

Clause 143.—On the suggestion of the same gentlemen we have added words to this clause directing the Local Government to cause an employer to be furnished with a certified copy of the Medical Officer's report under this clause. We understand that this direction is in accordance with existing practice.

Clause 151.—We have inserted words to make it clear that, notwithstanding the new provision in clause 125 as to the date of payment, wages commence to be in arrear from the first day of the month succeeding that in which they were earned.

Clause 153.—This is a new clause. It is intended to be an additional safeguard for the protection of labourers on any particular badly managed estate whose condition appears to the Local Government to be unsatisfactory owing to the insufficiency of their earnings to maintain them in health and comfort. In such cases the Local Government is empowered under this clause to direct, after such inquiry as it thinks necessary and after giving the employer an opportunity of showing cause against the order, that the labour-contracts of such labourers be cancelled.

Clause 156.—Our attention has been drawn to the fact that sub-clause (3) of this clause makes no provision for the case of a person who, having completed four years' service under a labour-contract and having entered into a new labour-contract for one year, wishes to redeem the unexpired portion of his new contract. We have therefore added a proviso to the sub-clause enabling such a person to redeem his new contract on payment of two rupees for each month of the unexpired portion, an amount which appears to be reasonable in all the circumstances of such a case.

Clauses 160 and 161.—The slight additions which we have suggested in these clauses have the same object as those we have suggested in the earlier part of clause 12, namely, to provide for cases in which temporary detention is necessary before a person is repatriated.

CHAPTER VIII.

RULES.

Clause 163.—We have made very extensive alterations in this clause, as we have re-arranged its sub-clauses and embodied in it the provisions of clause 3 of the Health Bill.

Further, we have revised the language of a number of the sub-clauses which relate to transport in order to make them applicable to the case both of contract-labourers and assisted emigrants, as the transport to the labour-districts of both of these classes will, in future, as we have explained above (see paragraph 2), be regulated under the provisions of the Bill when it becomes law. Lastly, we have provided for the special rule-making power as to detention and inspection of vessels, which was given by clause 165 of the Bill as introduced, by the addition of a new sub-clause (j) to this clause, and thus dispensed altogether with the last-mentioned clause.

CHAPTER IX.

PENALTIES AND PROCEDURE.

Clause 164.—Having regard to the serious nature of the offence (recruitment in contravention of the Act) with which this clause deals, we have enhanced the penalty from one month to six. We have, however, limited the fine which may be imposed to a total amount of five hundred rupees, instead of permitting it to extend to that amount in respect of every person wrongly recruited.

Clause 165.—This clause is new, its object being to provide for the punishment of recruiters who intentionally misdescribe persons produced for registration as labourers. We consider that this offence is one for which a special penalty is desirable.

Clauses 170 to 173.—We have inserted words in all these clauses to make it clear that they are limited to garden-sardars holding certificates under Chapter IV of the Act. We have also in clause 171, sub-clauses (b) and (c), substituted references to the date of execution of the labour-contract instead of references to the date of registration, and in clause 172 raised the term of imprisonment from three to six months and omitted the limit of the amount of fine, as we consider the gravity of the offence for which sub-clause (a) of this clause provides demands this enhanced penalty.

Clause 175 is new. It imposes a penalty of fine, which may extend to one thousand rupees, on every local agent or selecting agent who has or acquires any interest in a contractor's business or works for hire or reward in the interest of a contractor, and seems to us to be a very necessary provision for the protection of the employers of local agents and selecting agents.

Clause 184.—We have considerably altered this clause. Having regard to the provisions of clauses 168 and 169, we think that the provisions of this clause should be expressly limited to labourers who have executed labour-contracts, and that it should be made an offence for such a labourer to refuse or neglect to proceed "to the place where he is to labour" and not merely, as in the Bill as introduced, "from the district in which he was registered." On the other hand, we have reduced the penalty to imprisonment for one month, which we consider sufficient for such cases.

Clause 193.—We have omitted the words in this clause of the Bill as introduced which made a labourer liable to forfeit his wages for the period of his absence, as they appear to us to be superfluous seeing that a labourer's wages depend on his performance of a certain task. We have also omitted the provision requiring the labourer to pay to his employer a sum not exceeding four annas for each day of absence, as we have provided in an addition to clause 205 for the endorsement of such days of absence on the labour-contract.

Clause 195.—We have slightly altered the language used in sub-clauses (1) and (2) of this clause, which provides for the arrest of a deserter without warrant, in order to make it clear that the person who can act on behalf of an employer must be authorised by him in this behalf.

Clause 202.—We have slightly altered the language of this clause in order to make it clear that the employer of a labourer sentenced to imprisonment may at once, on his being so sentenced, apply for the cancellation of the sentence.

Clause 205.—In accordance with a suggestion made by the Tezpur Conference, which was accepted by the Chief Commissioner of Assam, we have, by the addition of four sub-clauses to this clause, restored with some modifications the existing law as contained in section 182A of Act I of 1882, which was omitted from the Bill as introduced. By our new sub-clause (2) we have provided for the endorsement on the labourer's contract by the Magistrate who convicts a labourer of unlawful absence under clause 193 or desertion under clause 198, of the period of the labourer's absence or desertion; but we have, by our new sub-clause (3), excluded cases of desertion in which the labour-contract has been cancelled under clause 200 or in which more than one year has elapsed from the expiry of the original term of the labour-contract, or more than three years have elapsed from the date when the labourer deserted to the date of his conviction; and we have further, by our new sub-clause (4), declared that the term of imprisonment shall in certain cases be deducted from the term of service. Our new sub-clause (5) corresponds to the second proviso to section 182A of the existing Act.

CHAPTER X.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Clause 218.—As there is a "Labour Transport Fund" in Bengal as well as Assam, we have omitted the word "Assam" from the title given to the fund in this clause as well as elsewhere in the Bill.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

FORM OF LABOUR-CONTRACT.

We propose to add a note to this form explaining that the employer is required (see clause 5 supra) to pay a full wage for half the daily tasks during the first six months unless the Inspector certifies that the labourer is able to perform the full task.

THE SECOND SCHEDULE.

ENACTMENTS REPEALED.

As the provisions of the Health Bill have been incorporated in this Bill, we have added to the list of enactments in this Schedule the portion of Act V of 1897 and the Inland Emigrants' Health Act, 1889, which the Health Bill proposed for repeal.

* Subject to note of dissent on clause 5, sub-clause (4).

I ACCEPT the main lines of the Bill, but I take strong exception to clause 5, sub clause (4), viz., the increase in wages for the second and third years, on the grounds that the necessity for the proposed enhancement has not been substantiated, and that the evidence placed before the Select Committee clearly shows that coolies are at present in a far better position financially than they have ever been. It has further been demonstrated that the wages earned are considerably in excess of the actual requirements of the tea garden labourer, and the necessaries of life are generally cheaper than they have been during the last twenty years or more.

Another matter deserving of consideration is that wages in Assam are generally higher than in the tea-districts of Bengal, where coolies emigrate under a free agreement for a similar description of labour. The tea-industry is not in a position to bear any additional tax, as the enhancement of wages for the second and third years would assuredly mean a general rise in wages throughout the Province.

I. BUCKINGH[illegible]

I AM strongly opposed to the raising of the minimum wage for the second and third years as provided in clause 5, sub-clause (4). No convincing evidence has in my opinion been brought forward in Select Committee to justify in ordinary times an increase in the wage, while to press for an increase at the present time, when the tea-industry is admittedly face to face with a crisis, seems to me inconsiderate and unwise, not only in the interests of the tea-garden proprietor but also in the interests of the labour-classes. The effect of an increase in wage can only be to make it more difficult for the employer of labour in the tea-districts to give employment to the labourer, a serious consideration when it is remembered that only a year ago His Excellency the Viceroy was pleading for millions in India who were starving.

ALLAN ARTHUR.

I AM glad to identify myself with the Report and with the draft Bill which will now be presented to Council. But with the permission of His Excellency the President of the Council I desire to place on record a summary of the reasons why I am unable to concur in the recommendation of the Committee to abandon the provisions of clause 5 of the Bill introduced into Council, which required every labour-contract to stipulate for a minimum monthly wage of not less than six rupees in the case of a man and five rupees in the case of a woman throughout the period of agreement, in lieu of the existing minimum wage of five rupees in the case of a man and four rupees in the case of a woman for the first three years, six rupees in the case of a man and five in that of a woman for the fourth year of the term of agreement. My reasons may be categorically stated as follows:—

1. It has been found by experience and it follows from the peculiar nature of a labour contract that it is absolutely necessary for the protection of the labourer who enters into such a contract to make it by law obligatory upon the employer to pay a reasonable minimum for his services.

2. By Act VI (B.C.) of 1865 a minimum monthly rate of wages was fixed by the legislature. The rate so fixed "after communication with persons who had a thorough acquaintance with the state of the labour-market in the Eastern Districts," and which the Select Committee of that time were "assured by those deeply interested in the cultivation of tea to be an equitable and reasonable minimum rate," was Rs. 5 for male adults and Rs. 4 for females.

3. The status of the labourer under this Act was that of a monthly labourer receiving a certain wage which could not under any circumstances be reduced by the employer. Save only for incapacity due to sickness, etc., wilful absence from work or wilful negligence or indolence, and then only by the order of the Protector or on conviction before a Magistrate, could the labourer receive less than the statutory rate.

4. It was found in practice impossible to enforce the payment of this fixed wage, and Act I of 1882, which is the present law, provided for payment of monthly wages at the rate of Rs. 5 and 4 for a completed daily task, and when such task was not completed for the payment of monthly wages calculated at the same rate in proportion to the amount of work actually done.

5. As a fact, the average rate of wages drawn by Act labourers in Assam has never actually been so high as Rs. 5 for a man and Rs. 4 for a woman, and as a fact the wages fixed for the labourer under the Act of 1865, even if he worked no overtime whatever, are higher than the average wages, including overtime, advances and sick allowances, earned in any of the past seventeen years by labourers under the Act of 1882.

6. There has occurred in Assam as well as in other parts of India a gradual general rise in the wages of unskilled labour in which tea-garden coolies under Act contracts have not participated. This general rise in Assam amounts on an average during the past twenty-five years to 44 per cent.

7. The present average rate of wages paid to unskilled labour in Assam is more than double that of the minimum wage prescribed by Act I of 1882.

8. The minimum rate of wage prescribed by the present law is insufficient not only because it is little more than the coolie is able to earn at his own doors without emigrating, but it is far less than he can earn in the neighbouring coal-mines or in Calcut

r in the tea-gardens of the Duars, where he gets practically all the advantages he gets n Assam without the disadvantage of a penal contract for a term of years. The "jungly" coolie, who is expected to serve for five rupees a month in Assam as an adscriptus glebæ, is able to earn from six to ten rupees a month in service as a free man much nearer to his home.

9. The minimum rate prescribed by the law has always been insufficient to procure uitable labour for the Assam tea-districts. So long ago as the 27th December, 868, the then Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, Sir William Grey, wrote:—"The simple ict is that the wages * * * are not sufficient to induce people who re in good circumstances to run the risks of emigration in order to secure them. It perfectly clear that the wages paid will not tempt in ordinary years and for a con- inuance anything like first class labourers." What was true more than thirty years ago now more true than ever. There is an regularly established business of buying and elling labour, and employers now pay for every labourer recruited under penal ontract a sum varying from Rs. 120 to 150, whereas a quarter of a century ago was paid for the same class of coolie about Rs. 50 or 60. The difference in price, or average about Rs. 80 for a coolie, represents the increased cost now incurred by industry in procuring labour. The average number of Act I labourers imported contractors into Assam during the five years from 1895 to 1899, inclusive, is 16,093, at a cost of Rs. 80 per head the average annual net increased loss to the industry during this period has been nearly 13 lakhs of rupees. The evidence recorded by the abour Commission of 1896 shows where this money has gone. It has filled the pockets an army of agents, contractors, daffadars and arkatis. It is money which would not have en spent if the rate of wages offered were as sufficient to secure suitable labour for Assam tea-districts as it was twenty-five years ago. The rate was notoriously insuffi- ent then, and it is, by the measure of this difference the more insufficient now. The tal annual loss incurred by the tea-industry on account of these buying and selling ansactions, which are so objectionable on other grounds, cannot be estimated at less an 16 lakhs of rupees.

10. The insufficiency of wages leads to the importation of a bad and even the orst class of labour. This has always been a great practical difficulty with the tea- dustry, and it augments year by year. It is one of the principal causes of the cessive mortality among Act labourers in Assam which during the past thirteen years, om 1887 to 1899 inclusive, has averaged 53·2 per thousand. It must be remembered at this is the mortality among adults in the prime of life. It amounts to what would considered a very heavy mortality if all ages were included. It is at least twice as as it would be if the rate of wages were sufficient to enable the employers to reject healthy labourers. The total average mortality among Act labourers in the Pro- during this period has been 6,175. If half of these could have been maintained an annual saving, at the estimated rate of Rs. 130 per head, amounting to 0,310, would have been effected. Apart from all considerations of humanity, the dustry is thus a heavy loser from paying wages on a scale which is insufficient to rent strong and healthy labourers.

11. It remains for me to say that it is only in years of scarcity in the recruiting dis- cts that even well-managed gardens are able to recruit coolies of a good class through rden-sardars at present rates, and that it is unfortunately a fact that there are very employers who are able to recruit all the coolies they require through garden-sardars. ntil a reasonable market-rate of wage is offered to Assam coolies, it will always be cessary to buy them at an extravagant and, I fear, increasing price, which, with such ficult and risky work as the crimping of labour implies, will always be demanded by, d always will be paid to, the contractor.

12. I am obliged to add that I have found in certain cases that the wages id to labourers are insufficient to maintain them in a healthy condition. It is not uncommon experience of Inspectors to report regarding tea-gardens, where the coolies ve an underfed and anæmic appearance, where the death-rate is high, often in ite of good sanitary arrangements, and desertions are numerous, indicating discontent ong the labour-force, that the chief cause for this unsatisfactory state of things is the ufficiency of wages. In tea as in every other great industry there are a number of ncerns, which owing to one cause or another are not prosperous and which are carried with difficulty, yielding little or no profit, and in such cases there is the strongest tempt- on to the managers to effect a short-sighted economy by increasing tasks and cutting wn wages. I have repeatedly brought to notice the insufficiency of the wages paid to olirers under contract, and I am expressing myself with studious moderation when I that I believe that one of the causes of the heavy mortality among Act coolies in the ince is that they do not always receive a living wage.

13. The objection taken by the majority of the Select Committee to the increase in the e of wages proposed in the Bill as introduced is that, if it were adopted, it would impose excessive burden on employers. Whether this would be so or not may be a subject for cussion, but I think I may claim to have shown that adherence to the existing rate poses an excessive burden on employers which would not be borne if the market-rate wages were paid to Act labourers. I deny, however, altogether that the increase pro- ed would have the result of putting employers to such additional expense as would l a dangerous blow to the industry. There is no reason why with a suitable adjust- nt of tasks the increase of wages should involve any increase of expenditure in the majority of gardens where the coolies are now well treated and contented. I do not anticipate that there would be any practical change in the condition of the labour-force on gardens where the tasks are at present light and the wages, including overtime payments, are already sufficient: but I do expect that the increase of wage would ameliorate the condition of the labourers in those ill-managed estates on which full tasks are exacted for the present insufficient legal wage and no margin is left to the coolie for earning anything in addition.

14. There is no force in the argument that an increase of wages followed by an augmentation of tasks would be no increase at all. The truth is that the proposed increase in the statutory minimum rate of wages is not likely to produce any effect upon the first class labourers who make, and will continue to make, large profits from overtime work, and it would not in itself, unless accompanied by the reduction in the rate of tasks which I am thankful the Committee have been pleased to accept, produce any effect on newly arrived coolies who are unable to do a full day's work; but it will immensely benefit the great mass of labourers who are content to, and can, perform the present task and will therefore get through a slightly augmented task in return for higher wages, but will, as they do now, get little or nothing from overtime.

15. If it be urged that the raising of task-rates in proportion to the increase in wages would be a matter of difficulty, that it would cause inconvenience and not be understood by the coolies, that it might upset the labour-force and cause discontent, I would reply that some inconvenience will no doubt be caused by a general alteration of task-rates, but there is no reason to suppose that it would be serious. Task-rates in tea-gardens are not uniformly or rigidly laid down. They vary from garden to garden and from time to time, in some cases from day to day, and from one part of a garden to another, under conditions and circumstances which are constantly changing. All industries are liable to some occasional disturbance in respect of wages, and the tea-industry cannot expect to be altogether exempt.

H. J. S. COTTON.

I APPROVE of the Bill as amended by the members of the Select Committee, with the exception of sub-clause (4) of clause 5.

I consider that the proposed enhancement of wages is unnecessary, and that it is not justified by any increase in the cost of living in the labour-districts, or by any corresponding rise of wages in the tea-districts of Bengal or in the Province of Assam or, generally speaking, in other districts of India.

In my opinion the wages earned by the labourers on tea-estates are sufficient to permit of their living in a thoroughly comfortable manner. On the other hand, in the present very critical state of the industry, the proposed increase of wages would prove ruinous to, and result in the closure of, many estates, and would thus ultimately affect in the most injurious manner the position and prospects of not only the whole labouring population of the tea-estates (for whose benefit the rise in wages is intended) but also those of many others whose prosperity is dependent on that of the tea-industry.

ASSAM LABOUR AND EMIGRATION BILL, AND ASSAM EMIGRANTS' HEALTH BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR CHARLES RIVAZ presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Emigration to the labour-districts of Assam, and on the Bill to make better provision for the health, supervision and control of Emigrants proceeding to or from the labour-districts of Assam. He said that, with His Excellency's permission, he proposed to ask the Council this day fortnight to take the Report into consideration.

INDIAN TOLLS (ARMY) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR CHARLES RIVAZ moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the exemption from tolls of persons and property belonging to the Army be taken into consideration. He said:—"I explained the object of this Bill briefly and the modifications proposed by the Select Committee when I presented their Report at the last meeting of Council, and I need not trouble Hon'ble Members with any further remarks."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR CHARLES RIVAZ moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The Hon'ble MAJOR-GENERAL SIR EDWIN COLLEN said:—"After the explanation which has been given by my Hon'ble colleague Sir Charles Rivaz on previous occasions, I need not take up the time of the Council by enlarging upon the provisions of the Bill. But I should like to point out that this matter has received very ample consideration. It was recognised long ago that there was a great variety in the special exemptions scattered through the Indian Statute-book, and that it would be advisable that we should consolidate these and bring the whole subject into harmony with the provisions of the Army Act. The question was definitely taken up as far back as 1892. The Local Governments and Administrations were consulted, and their replies were very full, although some of the questions dealt with were by no means simple. In 1895 a departmental Committee was appointed, of which Major-General Maitland, now Secretary in the Military Department, was appointed Chairman, and, if I may be allowed, I should especially wish to acknowledge the labours of that Committee. A draft Bill was prepared and was generally approved. It has since gone through various stages of discussion, by the Government of India collectively, by reference to the Secretary of State, and again to Local Governments, and, finally, a Select Committee of this Council has reviewed it. It must be admitted, I think, that the subject has been exhaustively discussed, and that the proceedings have been marked by some deliberation. This Bill will simplify the enactments in India, it will bring the subject into line with the Army Act, and I therefore cordially support the Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN PORTS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RALEIGH moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Ports Act, 1889, be taken into consideration.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. RALEIGH moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

INDIAN FOREST (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR CHARLES RIVAZ moved that the Bill further to amend the Indian Forest Act, 1878, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Raleigh, the Hon'ble Mr. Evans, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. K. Bose, the Hon'ble Sir Andrew Wingate, the Hon'ble Rai Sri Ram Bahadur and the mover, with instructions to report within one month.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 1st March, 1901.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, the 9th February, 1901.

Weather has been disturbed in Upper India during the past week, especially in the hills and submontane districts, and light to moderately heavy rain has been received in this area, the heaviest falls occurring in the Simla and Mussooree hills and the adjacent districts.

The depression, which at the close of the previous week was lying over Gujarat, extended northwards into Rajputana on Sunday and intensified rapidly, and light rain commenced falling in the Simla and Mussooree hills. On Monday the depression showed two ill defined centres, one of which still lay over Rajputana, while the other had moved eastwards into Khandesh and the adjacent districts of the Central Provinces. The latter had given no rain and continuing to advance eastwards practically filled up in the Central Provinces on Wednesday without influencing the weather to any important extent. The depression in Rajputana had caused light showers in Upper India on Monday, and by Tuesday morning had extended northwards into the Punjab and gave light to moderate rain in the Simla and Mussooree hills, and light showers in the East Punjab and the North-Western Provinces. Simla received 1·58 inches and Chakrata 1·40 inches. The depression remained practically unchanged in position and character during the next 24 hours, and rain and snow continued in the Upper India hills and rain in the Punjab and the North-Western Provinces, especially in the Punjab submontane districts. Ludhiana reported a heavy fall of 1·87 inches, Rawalpindi 1·57 inches and Umballa 1·40 inches. By Thursday morning the depression had practically filled up, only a shallow residual depression being shown in the western districts of the North-Western Provinces, but light to moderate rain had continued in the Punjab hills and plains and the North-Western Provinces, Simla recording a fall of 1·23 inches, Cherat 1·09 inches, Chakrata ·96 inch and Umballa ·90 inch, the heaviest rain again occurring in the vacinity of the Simla and Mussooree hills. The residual depression drifted eastwards and filled up, giving light to moderate showers in Chota Nagpur and the adjacent districts on Friday, the only important fall being one of 1·24 inches at Hazaribagh.

On Thursday a shallow depression, shown chiefly by the pressure isabnormals, was lying over the east of the Central Provinces and continued in practically the same position till Saturday, when a brisk fall of the barometer in the north of the Bombay Deccan and Berar extended the area of low pressure westwards, which thus covered nearly the whole of the north of the Peninsula. Beyond giving a few light showers in the Central Provinces this depression had not influenced the weather to any important extent up to the end of the week.

With the exception of Malabar no rain of any importance has fallen in the south of the Peninsula.

Rain.—Heavy rain and snow have fallen in the Punjab hills and moderately heavy rain in the north and submontane Punjab. The rainfall of the week has been in excess of the normal in the Brahmaputra Division of Assam, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, the North-Western Provinces (except the hills and west divisions), the Punjab, Central India, East Rajputana, the Central and East divisions of the Central Provinces and Malabar. The average fall in the Punjab hills was 4·35 inches, which was 3·60 inches in excess of the normal.

		Inches.
N.-W. Provinces	Chakrata	2·72

The rainfall of the period, December 30th to February 9th, as will be seen from the last three columns of the table at the end, has been in defect in Burma, Eastern Bengal, the Surma and hills divisions of Assam, Gujarat, Kathiawar, Coorg and the East Coast (south). It has varied by less than 20 per cent. from the normal, and is therefore practically normal, in Deltaic, Central and North Bengal, the South and West Punjab, and West Rajputana, and has been in excess in all the remaining divisions. The largest actual excess has occurred in Chota Nagpur, South Bihar, North Oudh, the east, north and east submontane divisions of the North-Western Provinces, and the north submontane and hills divisions of the Punjab.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, the 16th February, 1901.

Madras.—The rainfall of the week was good in the Circars, the Carnatic, excepting Nellore and North Arcot; moderate in Nellore, Salem and Tanjore; light or nil elsewhere. Water supplies have improved where rain fell, though they are still insufficient in part of Vizagapatam, the Deccan, the Carnatic, the Central districts, Madura and on the West Coast. Ploughing, sowing and transplanting are going on in parts. The standing crops generally are in fair condition, but are withering or blighted in parts of Kistna, the Deccan and the Carnatic. Harvests continue with moderate outturn. Fodder is generally available, but pasture is getting scanty in parts of the Deccan and the central and west coast districts. The condition of cattle is generally normal. Prices continue generally high. The price of rice in Kistna and that of some of the dry grains in parts of the Deccan, North Arcot and Salem are at or above the scarcity rates. The recent rainfall has done some good in parts, though prospects in Cuddapah and Salem are not encouraging. The numbers on relief were test workers—Cuddapah—men 115, women 175, children 37, total 327. The decrease is due to low rates of wages paid. Weavers relieved, men 1,683, women 1,328.

Bombay.—Very slight rain fell during the week in parts of Bijapur. Reaping of autumn crops is nearly over in Dharwar and continues in parts of Surat. Threshing is in progress in parts of Sindh and Surat. Agricultural prospects are good in Sindh, fair to good in the Konkan and parts of Surat, Broach, Nasik and Belgaum, and generally moderate to poor elsewhere. Standing spring crops have been damaged by locusts or other insects in parts of Sindh, Kaira, Ahmedabad and Nasik, and are generally suffering from want of moisture except in irrigated lands. Harvesting of spring crops is in progress in parts of Broach, Ahmednagar, Nasik, Satara, Sholapur and the Karnatak. Cotton picking is progressing in parts of Surat, Broach, Baroda and the Karnatak. Preparation of lands for next season is going on in parts of the Konkan, Nasik, Poona and Belgaum. The fodder supply is generally sufficient, but is scanty in parts of Bijapur and Belgaum. Agricultural stock is in good condition, but is deteriorating in parts of Bijapur. The water-supply is getting scanty in parts of Ahmednagar, Sholapur, Poona, Belgaum and Dharwar. Prices have fallen in six districts, risen in two districts, and are stationary elsewhere. The price of rice is slightly over normal, but easier than in 1900. The price of bajri is about normal in Gujarat and considerably over normal elsewhere but, compared with 1900, is slightly easier in the Konkan and is considerably easier in Gujarat, the Deccan and the Karnatak. The price of juar is below normal in Gujarat and considerably over normal elsewhere and, compared with 1900, about the same in the Konkan and considerably easier elsewhere. The price of wheat is over normal in Gujarat and the Konkan and about double normal in the Deccan and the Karnatak and, compared with 1900, slightly easier in Gujarat and about the same in the Konkan, the Deccan and the Karnatak.

TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Simla, the 22nd May, 1900.

TELEGRAMS FOR THE TROOPS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

No. 9.—The following revised notification is published for general information :—

Until further notice, State and Private telegrams in plain language addressed to persons serving with the Field Force in South Africa will be accepted at Sender's risk, and charged for at the rate of Rı-8 per word from offices in India or Burma. Telegrams in Code or Cypher cannot be accepted at this reduced rate. The address should consist of the following :—

(1) The name, or number, or both of the person to whom the telegram is addressed (in the case of officers the rank may be omitted, and in the case of telegrams for Non-Commissioned Officers and men the name may, in like manner, be omitted if the number is given. Such omissions, however, add to the risk of the telegram going astray, more especially when addressed to Non-Commissioned Officers and men), and

(2) The Regiment (this will be counted and charged for as one word irrespective of the number of words used).

These telegrams should be addressed "Bombay for South Africa" (which words will be signalled free), and not to any particular Telegraph Office in South Africa. The Bombay Telegraph Office will forward them to the Officer Commanding at Capetown, who will deliver them to the Addressees at whatever place in South Africa they may be stationed.

Senders of telegrams should accurately describe the Regiment, Battalion, Battery or Corps, to which the Addressees are attached, as it appears in the "Army List." For example: the address of an Officer or Private in the "Rifles" should give the number of the Battalion, and make it quite clear whether it is a Battalion of the "Rifle Brigade," the "King's Royal Rifle Corps," the "Royal Irish Rifles," or the "Scottish Rifles (Cameronians)."

The reduced rate will also apply to telegrams addressed to members of the Nursing Staff serving in South Africa, and any telegrams addressed to a Nurse will be treated in the same way as those intended for soldiers and sailors.

Telegrams for officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men in South Africa who are known to be suffering from wounds or sickness may be addressed to them as if they were with their regiment or corps. Such telegrams, on arrival at the place where the regiment or corps is stationed, will be redirected to the proper hospital.

When, however, the name of the hospital is known to the sender of the message, he may address the telegram direct to that hospital, e.g., "Field Hospital, 1st Cavalry Brigade," or to "No. 2 General Hospital" or to "Mooi River Hospital."

In any case, the telegram should, as already stated, be addressed by the sender to "Bombay for South Africa," which words will not be charged for.

The following are given as examples of addresses and counting :—

"Captain Armstrong, 64th Royal Field Artillery, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "Captain Armstrong, Wynberg Hospital, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "7303 Murphy, 2nd Battalion, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "7303, Mooi River Hospital, Bombay for South Africa" (two words).

II. Notification No. 5, dated the 8th May, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

The 5th December, 1900.

These telegrams should be written in plain English, and will be accepted only at the risk of the sender. They are also subject to censorship and to delay in transmission.

Calcutta, the 13th December, 1900.

No. 39.—The following revised notification is published for general information :—

The Post Master General, London, announces that the British Government have decided to suspend at Aden and the Cape of Good Hope the transmission of all telegrams in code or cipher, whether of foreign Governments or private persons, to or from British Central Africa, St. Helena and Ascension. Code messages for the following places, viz., Cape Colony, Natal, Rhodesia, Zanzibar, Seychelles, Mauritius, Madagascar, British and German East Africa, Mozambique and Lourenço Marques may, however, be accepted, if the words used are in one, or other, of the following Code Books, which have been deposited with the authorities at Aden, viz. :—

(1) A B C (4th edition).
(3) Scott's (9th edition).
(4) A 1.
(6) The Mercuur Code (2nd edition), enlarged and revised, with the First Supplement.

(12) International Mercantile Telegraph Code (Meyer), 1880.

Telegrams should be endorsed to the effect that the words used actually represent the corresponding expressions given in the above named Code Books.

As delays occur at Aden in consequence of the difficulty of determining which code has been employed, senders of telegrams to the abovenamed places in East Africa should write on the message draft the name of the code employed. For instance A B C; A Z; Scott's; A 1; Staudt; Mercuur; Broomhall's; Directory; Atlantic, 1898, Atlantic, 1900; Watkins; Meyer; or McCutcheon. This information will be included in the "Official Instructions" and transmitted free of charge.

II. Notification No. 35, dated the 29th November, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

No. 39-A.—In the event of the establishment in British India of a censorship over telegrams, the first twelve Code Books mentioned in Notification No. 39, dated the 13th of December, 1900, will be used in India for purposes similar to that for which they are employed in Aden.

The public are recommended to provide themselves with such of the codes as may appear suited to their requirements.

The 31st January, 1901.

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill further to amend the Indian Forest Act, 1878, was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

From High Court, Calcutta, No. 150, dated 15th January, 1901 [Paper No. 1].

2. In order to admit of the suspension of rights with regard to some forests and not with regard to others, we have substituted the words "any right" for the words "all rights" in the addition to section 32 of the Act proposed by clause 2 of the Bill.

3. It has been pointed out in several quarters that, if the words "demanding his aid" be omitted altogether from section 78 of the Act, as contemplated by clause 4 of the Bill, the provision will go too far, and we have acted on the suggestion that the words should be eliminated as regards only clauses (a) and (b) of the section.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, the 16th February, 1901.

The chief feature in the meteorology of the past week has been the remarkably heavy rain for this time of the year given on the east coast of the Peninsula and in Burma by the depression which formed in the Central Provinces during the previous week.

On Sunday morning the depression had intensified slightly and had given a few light showers in the Central Provinces and the east of the North-Western Provinces, but the heaviest fall reported was only ·44 inch at Raipur. By Monday the depression had extended eastwards into South-West Bengal and southwards into the Madras Deccan, pressure being inconsiderable to large defect in this area, and showers had fallen in Chota Nagpur and South Bihar, the largest amount reported being 1·09 inches at Ranchi. No rain of any importance had fallen in the Central Provinces. Pressure continued low in the Madras Deccan during the next 24 hours, but the depression in the north-east of the Peninsula advanced eastwards and had passed out into the Bay by Tuesday morning. Light to moderate showers had fallen in North-East India, and light showers in the Central Provinces and the Madras Deccan. Ranchi received 1·21 inches, Burdwan 1 inch and Chaibassa ·98 inch. The low pressure area in the Deccan drifted eastwards and lay off the Corromandel Coast during the remainder of the week. The depression in the north of the Bay advanced very slowly eastwards, and it was not till Friday that it crossed the Arakan Coast and filled up. Weather was very disturbed in the Bay during the passage eastwards of this storm, especially on the Arakan and Lower Burma Coast, and very heavy rain for this time of the year fell in Orissa, Deltaic Bengal, the Madras coast districts and Burma. The following gives the heaviest falls reported in each day :—

		Inches.
Wednesday—	Masulipatam	3·80
	False Point	3·14
	Saugor Island	2·98
	Cuttack	2·51
	Vizagapatam	1·90
Thursday—	Diamond Island	3·82
	Cuddalore	2·84
	Bassein	2·37
	Thayetmyo	2·11
Friday—	Masulipatam	3·30
	Bassein	2·80
	Vizagapatam	2·54
	Rangoon	1·91

A shallow depression formed on Monday in Sind and the South-West Punjab and continued almost stationary during the first part of the week, and then filled up, but it was of no importance and gave no rain.

On Saturday conditions were again slightly suspicious in the Central Provinces and the adjacent districts in the west of the Peninsula, where the barometer had fallen slightly and winds shown a tendency to the establishment of a cyclonic circulation.

Rain.—The rainfall of the week has averaged more than two inches in Lower and Central Burma and one inch in Arakan, Deltaic Bengal, Orissa, Chota Nagpur and the Madras Coast; and has been in excess in Burma, Bengal, Orissa, Chota Nagpur, Malabar, Mysore, Madras and the Central Provinces.

The following gives the largest amounts received at individual stations during the week :—

		Inches.
Burma—	Bassein	5·17
	Maubin	4·55
Bengal—	Contai (Midnapore)	4·20
Orissa—	Jajpur	3·92
Chota Nagpur—	Jaintigarh	4·20
Madras Coast—	Amalapuram (Godavery)	5·37
	Masulipatam	8 35
	Conjeeveram	4·79

The last three columns of the table at the end show that the rainfall of the period, December 30th to February 16th, was practically normal in the Brahmaputra Valley, North Bengal, the hills division of the North-Western Provinces, the South and West Punjab, the Baluchistan hills and West Rajputana. It has been in defect in Eastern Bengal, the Surma and hills divisons of Assam, Gujarat Kathiawar and Coorg, and has been in considerable to very large excess elsewhere.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, the 23rd February, 1901.

Madras.—The rainfall was general and good in Kistna, the Deccan districts, Nellore, South Arcot, Tanjore and the Nilgiris, and moderate or light elsewhere. Water supplies are generally sufficient, except in parts of the Deccan, the Central and West Coast districts and in Chingleput and Madura. Ploughing, sowing and transplanting continue in parts. Standing crops are generally in fair condition, but have been damaged or are withering in parts of Kistna, the Deccan and the Carnatic districts. Harvests of late crops continue to yield moderately. Fodder generally is available, but pasture is getting scanty in parts of the Deccan and the Central and West Coast districts. The condition of cattle is generally good. Prices are stationary or slightly easier, though in the case of some of the dry grains they continue above the scarcity rates in parts of the Deccan, North Arcot and Salem. Prospects generally are fair and have been improved by recent rains in most districts, but are not encouraging in Salem. Numbers on relief—test workers—Cuddapah, men 199, women 235, children 39; total 473. Weavers relieved, men 1,684, women 1,328.

Bombay.—Slight rain fell during the week in parts of Bijapur and Dhurwar, and there was a very slight fall in parts of Shikarpur, the Upper Sindh Frontier, Ahmednagar, Poona, Satara, Sholapur, Belgaum, Ratnagiri and Kanara. Reaping of autumn crops is completed in Kaira and Dharwar, and is nearly over in the Upper Sindh Frontier and Khandesh districts. Threshing continues in parts of Sindh and Surat. Agricultural prospects are good in Sindh, fair to good in the Konkan and in parts of Kaira, Surat, Broach, Khandesh, Nasik, Poona, Satara and Dharwar, and moderate to poor elsewhere. Standing spring crops have been damaged by locusts or other insects in parts of Sindh, Ahmedabad and Nasik, and by frost in parts of Broach, Surat and Satara, and are generally suffering from want of moisture, except in irrigated lands. Harvesting of spring crops is in progress in parts of Sindh, Kaira, Broach, Surat, the Deccan, the Karnatak and Kanara. Preparation of lands for next season is going on in parts of the Konkan, Khandesh, Nasik, Poona and Belgaum. The fodder supply is generally sufficient, but is scanty in parts of Bijapur. Agricultural stock is in good condition except in parts of Bijapur. The water supply is getting scanty in parts of Ahmednagar, Poona, Sholapur, and the Karnatak. Prices have fallen in seven districts, risen in five districts, and are stationary elsewhere. The price of rice is slightly over normal, but easier than in 1900 in Gujarat, the Konkan and the Karnatak, and about the same in the Deccan. The price of bajri is about normal in Gujarat, and considerably over normal in the Deccan, the Konkan and the Karnatak, and that of juar is below normal in Gujarat and considerably over normal elsewhere. Compared with 1900, prices of bajri and juar are about the same in the Konkan and considerably easier in Gujarat, the Deccan and the Karnatak. The price of wheat is over normal in Gujarat and the Konkan and about double normal in the Deccan and the Karnatak and is slightly higher than in 1900.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

CURTAILMENT AND REDUCTION OF PERIODICAL REPORTS AND RETURNS.

No. 987-1013.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India in the Home Department (Public),—under date Calcutta, the 25th February 1901.

RESOLUTION.

THE Governor General in Council has for some time had under consideration the question of the curtailment and reduction of periodical reports and returns in view of the removal of the complaint often made—as the Government of India consider with reason—that the time of officers engaged in the different branches of the Civil Administration is occupied in the preparation of such reports and returns to an extent that is detrimental to the proper performance of their other duties. The question does not now come before the Government of India for the first time, and before enumerating the directions which the Governor General in Council has determined to issue, it is desirable to refer to the discussions of former years on the subject.

2. As long ago as 1872 the Secretary of State for India drew attention to the number and voluminous character of the printed reports forwarded for the information of Her Majesty's Government. The subject was at that time approached mainly from the point of view of the desirability of restricting the expenditure in printing public documents, and the Government of India in their Resolution of 21st November 1874 suggested, for the consideration of Local Governments and Administrations,—

(1) that the separate printing of some departmental reports should be prohibited, their subject matter being digested and edited in the annual administration report;

(2) that the reports of which the separate printing was sanctioned should, as a rule, be limited to a fixed maximum number of pages and to a fixed size of type and page not to be exceeded or changed without the sanction of the Local Government;

(3) that all Heads of Departments should be required to condense and edit instead of reproducing in extenso the reports of their subordinates unless any particular report possessed special value and interest that would be lost by condensation.

The Local Governments and Administrations were requested to prepare lists of reports submitted to them for ultimate transmission to the Government of India (1) which might be separately published and limited in size, or (2) which might be in future abandoned as separate reports and included in the general administration report, and to consider how far the conclusions of the Government of India might be extended to reports submitted to the Local Governments and Administrations but not sent on to the Government of India. These instructions were approved by the Secretary of State with the caution that the Government of India should be careful not to offer any impediment to the collection of really valuable statistical information.

3. As a result of the reference to the Local Governments, the Government of India determined (1) that the more important reports must be separately printed with the review of the Local Government upon them, and left it to the Local Governments to decide whether a few of the less important reports should be printed or not; (2) not to press the suggestion to fix a maximum number of pages for each report, but they directed Local Governments to instruct subordinate officers to reduce the departmental reports to a more convenient size; (3) that all annual reports should be printed in foolscap folio, the type of the report proper being solid pica, and that of the extracted matter and the appendices small pica; (4) that Heads of Departments should be forbidden to reproduce in extenso the reports of subordinates.

4. These instructions had such little effect that in 1885, the late Sir Charles Aitchison, then Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, approached the Government of India with proposals for reform in the preparation and treatment of annual reports based upon the conclusion that the system of reporting had grown to be a great incubus upon the administration, and that it was incumbent on the Government to lighten the load as much as possible. He stated that the annual reports in the Punjab had in many cases become far more elaborate and detailed than was the case ten years before. The measures of reform suggested were the discontinuance of any separate reports which could be shown to be unnecessary; the substitution of triennial for annual reports in the case of all reports of value rather from a statistical or financial than from an administrative point of view, returns accompanied by the briefest possible notes being prepared in the other two years; and, in the case of the more important reports, the introduction of a system under which a full report would be submitted every third year and brief reports in intermediate years.

5. The Government of India, while sympathizing with the desire of the Punjab Government to reduce within more reasonable dimensions the work of writing and reviewing reports, had doubts whether the proposals made might not, if carried out in their entirety, have the effect of depriving departmental officers of a ready means of ascertaining the latest particulars in regard to current departmental administration, and of benefiting by the experience of each year as embodied in the annual report. They were also apprehensive that the discontinuance of the annual reviews of departmental reports by Local Governments and Administrations might remove a very useful check, and possibly lead to a perpetuation or continuance of errors of policy or administration which it was desirable to remove without loss of time but which, under the proposed arrangement, might not come to the notice of the Local Government until the lapse of a considerable period after their introduction. It appeared to be also possible that under the system proposed the intermediate reports might become so brief as to be of little practical value, and the triennial report unduly prolix. The absence on leave of permanent officers would also interfere with the preparation of the full triennial report, and a Lieutenant-Governor in a five years' tenure of office would be able to review the work of any department at most twice, and possibly only once. They, therefore, considered that annual reports on the more important branches of the administration must continue, but that in the case of some of the less important departments a brief report for two years with a full and careful report in the third year would ordinarily suffice, and that in some departments it would not be necessary to require more than a full report every third year with brief notes in the intermediate years.

6. After consultation with the Local Governments the conclusion of the Government of India was embodied in Home Department Resolution No. $\frac{28}{1570-95}$, dated 15th July 1887, and published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India of the 23rd idem. It was briefly that annual reports must be maintained, firstly, where the reports deal with the application of administrative principles still open to modification, or the concrete working of which has to be watched, and secondly, where the reports contain statistics which for administrative purposes must be compiled and examined annually. Applying these principles it was decided to maintain as annual reports the following reports submitted to the Home Department of the Government of India, viz., those on General Administration, Municipal Administration, Local Boards' Administration, Education, Civil and Criminal Justice, Jail Administration, Police Administration, and Lunatic Asylums. It was determined that the reports on Registration, Dispensaries, Vaccination, and the Destruction of Wild Beasts and Snakes should be submitted triennially, statistical returns and brief commentaries in the shape of notes being submitted in the intermediate years. At the instance of the Secretary of State this decision was subsequently modified in regard to the report on the destruction of wild beasts and snakes which he wished to be submitted annually as before.

The Government of India also expressed their opinion that the compression of reviews was not less called for than the curtailment of reports, and directed that a review should contain only what is necessary to communicate the judgment of the reviewing authority regarding the salient features of the report.

7. This second attempt to reduce the volume of reports had as little effect as the first, and an examination of recent reports shows that the standing orders of the Government of India have been to a large extent ignored in practice. In spite of their appeal to Local Governments and Administrations to insist on curtailment of reports to the utmost extent which is consistent with a proper examination of the facts and figures presented in them, many of the annual reports are more diffuse and imperfectly edited than ever. In spite of the opinion expressed by the Government of India that the compression of reviews was urgently called for, the reviews of Local Governments and Administrations in many instances continue to contain a large amount of matter which is merely an abridged repetition of what is set forth in the report itself. In cases in which triennial reports have been prescribed the tendency has been for the commentaries of intermediate years to gradually increase in volume. For instance, the last triennial report on the administration of stamps, submitted by one Local Government, filled 24 pages of narrative and 31 of statistics, and the last intermediate commentary 9 pages of narrative and 24 of statistics. With the triennial report were submitted statistical returns for three years, and with the intermediate commentary for two years. Thus all the statistics were given three times over. The instructions issued in 1878 that the reports of subordinate officers should not be printed in extenso have been frequently ignored. An instance of the extent to which this direction is neglected is found in a report regarding the administration of Local Boards recently received. The orders contained in the Home Department Circular No. $\frac{41}{3131-50}$, dated the 8th December 1888, prescribed a brief report by the Local Government with statistical tables, yet in this report were printed no less than 73 pages of reports from Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners, the report of the Local Administration itself being in the form of a resolution covering only about two pages. The orders which require reports to be printed in type of a particular kind are not infrequently disregarded. In cases in which definite dates have been fixed as the latest on which annual reports are due to be submitted to the Government of India serious attempts do not appear to have been made to comply with the order. In Home Department No. $\frac{11}{790-801}$, dated 24th April 1891, the latest date for the submission to the Home Department of the Government of India of each of the annual reports submitted to it was fixed. In the last year for which each report was due 62 were submitted in time, 77 were less than a month late, 33 more than a month and less than two months late, and 30 more than two months late, the period of default reaching in several instances to over four months.

8. The Government of India believe that previous orders directed towards the reduction of the size of reports have mainly failed in their object because they enunciated general principles instead of also pointing out definite flaws in practice. To some extent also their failure was due to the disregard by Local Governments and Administrations as well as by subordinate officials of the definite orders laid down by the Government of India. The Governor General in Council has now carefully reconsidered the question of reducing the number and bulk of annual reports and periodical returns, and has determined to lay down more precise directions for future observance. His Excellency in Council is confident that he may rely on the earnest support of Local Governments and Administrations in amending and restricting the further growth of a procedure which impairs the administrative efficiency of officials whose time is consumed in writing reports so overlaid with detail that they convey no clear impression of facts to the controlling authority or the public.

9. Owing to the peculiar conditions of service and the frequent change of personnel in India more and longer reports are required in this country than in Great Britain or the Colonies. Their use in India is to place before the Local and Supreme Governments a complete record of the year's operations, and to furnish the officers of Government with a permanent and easily accessible record of the past experience of others than themselves in the Department in which they are serving. They are also required to furnish the Secretary of State for India with full information regarding the progress of administrative affairs in India, to provide materials for the compilation of the report on moral and material progress, the statistical abstract, and other returns which must be presented to Parliament, and to facilitate the preparation of answers to questions in Parliament without reference to India. Lastly, they are useful in providing for the public, both in India and Great Britain, accurate information and statistics regarding the progress of the administration in all its branches.

10. In order to be really valuable for these purposes a report should consist of accurate facts and figures with concise and intelligent criticism of them, both facts and comments being contained within reasonable compass. In proportion as its space is occupied by discussions, even though they may be useful or interesting in themselves, or by the record of the writer's views on points cognate with the subject matter of the report, its utility will be diminished. A narrative is required, as well as tabulated statistics, in order to adequately exhibit the facts of the year's administration, but there is a tendency on the one hand to introduce into the narrative much that might be compressed into brief statistical tables, and on the other hand to embody tabular statistical tables in the letter press of a report because the writer is inclined to exhibit the facts in a form prepared mechanically by ministerial subordinates rather than adopt the more laborious and more useful process of digesting them into a concise and lucid narrative. The multiplicity of tables by no means ensures brevity of narrative, and the object in view is so to distribute the information between narrative and statistics as to present the record of the year's work in the most interesting and comprehensible form.

(i) the report should contain only the explanation of really important or suggestive variations in the statistics, and the statement of really noteworthy facts in the history of the year's administration ;

(ii) no mere paraphrasing and reproduction of the statistics should be allowed in the report ;

(iii) all attempts to offer explanations of variations in the figures, which are not important or unusual, should be excluded unless the fact alleged in explanation is in itself important enough to demand mention ;

(iv) the idea that it is necessary to say something should be discarded, and it should be recognized that the briefer a report is the better, if it says all that need be said to show an intelligent comprehension of the meaning of the facts and figures and of the salient features of the year's work.

These principles apply equally to the reviews of Local Governments and Administrations. A review should be strictly limited to comment or criticism on the general results, so far as comment or criticism is required, or to directions arising out of some statement of fact or opinion which seems to require notice by the Local Government or Administration. If a précis or summary of the report is made for the convenience of the head of the Local Government or Administration, it is not necessary that it should be published.

11. In order that these principles may be carried properly into practice it is essential to prescribe a maximum limit for each report. The proposal that this should be done was, the Governor General in Council considers, put aside on insufficient grounds in 1878, and experience shows that no lasting reform in the curtailment of reports is likely to be secured if this check is abandoned. The circumstances of the different provinces are in many respects dissimilar, and it will not be possible to fix the same limit for the same report from each province. What is required is that a maximum limit suitable for a year of ordinary conditions should be fixed for each report submitted in each province. This limit need not be worked up to in every year, but it should never be exceeded unless the writer has for exceptional reasons sought and obtained, before undertaking his report, from the Government of India or the Local Government, whichever is the authority to which the report goes in the first instance, permission to exceed it in a particular year. At present the writer of a report usually places before himself, as a standard from which he must not fall short, the length of his predecessor's report. It is unreasonable, however, that the State should, unlike any other employer of literary labour, give its writers unlimited discretion as to space.

12. The principles stated in paragraph 10 should be followed, so far as they apply, in the preparation of reviews of reports by the Local Governments. It is the practice in connection with some reports to have intermediate reviews between the actual report and the review of it by the Local Government. Thus some Boards of Revenue or other authorities review in this manner excise, opium, salt, income tax, and stamp reports, and in Madras the reports on the destruction of wild beasts and snakes, and the Commissioners of Divisions review other reports. The Governor General in Council desires that all such intermediate reviews formally recapitulating or summarising the matter contained in the district reports shall be suppressed. This, however, will not apply to comments of either the Board of Revenue or the Commissioner of the Division on a report made in compliance with the general or special request of the Local Government. Such comments may be made briefly on the margin of the original report, or be embodied in a concise note so that they can be utilized, if necessary, by the Government in preparing its review, or for the purpose of issuing any orders that may be considered necessary.

13. In some of the annual reports the amount of statistical matter in the report (apart from its appendices) covers as much space as the letter press itself. The introduction into the text of large numbers of tables of superfluous and unassimilated statistics (usually a reproduction in an abridged form of the statistics in the appendices) detracts from the value and interest of a report while it greatly increases the cost of printing it. In the opinion of the Government of India the body of the report should be almost entirely in narrative form. It will occasionally be necessary to introduce tables of comparative statistics into the narrative, but such tables should be brief and simple and their number rigidly restricted.

14. The Government of India have prescribed statistical tables to accompany a large number of the reports submitted to them, but in the case of some reports, e.g., those relating to the land revenue and excise, divergent local conditions make the use of general tables for all provinces impossible. In the case of all reports for which tables have been prescribed by the Government of India, no additional tables should be appended to and referred to in the Report without the previous sanction of the Government of India.

It should be particularly noted that no addition to or modification in any of the tables prescribed by the Government of India should be made without the previous sanction of that authority. The effect of such modifications is to make interprovincial or other comparisons difficult or impossible, and to prevent the construction of general tables for all India.

15. There are a few minor matters in connection with the preparation of reports to which the Governor General in Council desires to draw attention :

(i) when maps are given it is convenient to place them at the beginning or end of the volume :

(ii) it is desirable to restrict the number of maps and diagrams : these may be occasionally useful as graphic illustrations of interesting or important variations, and in reports of a special character, such as that relating to railways, diagrams may be necessary, but for ordinary reports, tables answer all purposes :

(iii) tables of statistics should not be printed sideways on a page unless distinct economy of space thereby results. The foolscap size lends itself easily to the printing of tables with their heading across instead of along the length of the page :

(iv) pages of tabular matter are frequently printed with the columns left entirely or almost entirely blank. This is in almost all cases unnecessary. It can often be remedied by dispensing with columns seldom used, and sometimes by discontinuing or recasting the return:

(v) the number of pages fixed as the maximum limit of the report should be given on the page containing the table of contents:

(vi) the practice of giving in full detail and in separate columns in tables of statistics the corresponding figures for the preceding year is objectionable. In most cases it will be found sufficient to give corresponding figures for the totals only, by means of one additional line at the foot of the table:

(vii) cross references between the statistical tables and the paragraphs discussing them should be given by means of marginal entries on the paragraphs and, if possible, also on the tables themselves:

(viii) the directions of the Government of India that reports should be printed in solid pica and the extracted matter and appendices in small pica should be strictly followed:

(ix) a date should be fixed for the submission of every report in respect of which this has not already been done, and Local Governments and Administrations should insist on all reports being submitted by the fixed date, and whenever there is inexcusable or careless and persistent unpunctuality, bring the offending officer sharply to book.

16. The Government of India have recently received from the Secretary of State suggestions for the curtailment of the statistical appendices attached to the general administration report. The Government of India are considering the question of dispensing with many of the tables attached to that report, and of effecting a large reduction in the space devoted to the letter press. A separate communication will shortly be made to Local Governments and Administrations on this matter.

17. In the opinion of the Government of India the relief of officers engaged directly in the work of administration from unprofitable office work can be attained not only by curtailing the size of the annual reports which they have to submit, but also by reducing the number of subsidiary reports and returns, monthly, quarterly, and half-yearly, which Collectors of Districts and other local officers are now required to submit to superior authority. An inquiry made in the Madras Presidency a few years ago was followed by the abolition of many such reports and returns, and in the extension to officers of all grades engaged in the district administration of wider powers in a variety of directions with the result that much correspondence asking for sanction or reporting action in regard to these matters has now been dispensed with. The Government of India desire that an inquiry of this nature should be undertaken under the orders of other Local Governments and Administrations by a selected officer of experience both in Secretariat and district work. The Government of India will, in separate communications which are in course of preparation and will shortly be addressed to the Local Governments and Administrations, indicate generally the extent to which the reports submitted by Local Governments to the Supreme Government might be curtailed, and will issue detailed instructions and suggestions for adoption by Local Governments and Administrations in respect of the reports on matters in which the Government of India have a special financial or other interest. In the case of the majority of the reports the suggestions of the Government of India will have to be carried into execution under the orders of the Local Government or Administration; and in order to facilitate this, definite proposals for the curtailment of individual reports should be worked out in detail for the consideration of the Local Government and Administration by the officer on special duty in communication with the officer responsible for the preparation of the report. The orders issued by the Local Governments and Administrations in respect of the reports submitted to each Department of the Government of India should be separately reported to that Department. In order to facilitate the inquiries of the special officer it would be convenient that he should call for a statement in the form appended to this Resolution of all reports and returns whether submitted to the Government of India or to any other authority, and that the statement should mention the date on which each report or return has to be submitted by the local official, and, in the case of reports and returns furnished to the Government of India, the date on which it is forwarded by the Local Government. The statement should also note how many of the returns are required for the purposes of the Local Government or Administration or of any authority subordinate to it, and how many are furnished in obedience to the instructions of the Government of India. The Government of India would be obliged if an amalgamated statement for each province of all such reports and returns appertaining to it is furnished to each Department of the Government of India. When orders have been passed by the Local Governments fixing the reports and returns which will have in future to be furnished by local officials, steps must be taken to ensure that they are not again added to without proper scrutiny, and that all the reports and returns which continue to be furnished are carefully examined in order to test whether the directions as to their preparation have been fully complied with. On the receipt of a report by the Government of India a similar examination will be made, in order that any tendency to ignore the principles now laid down may be promptly and effectively checked.

18. The Governor General in Council desires to make it clear that there is no intention of allowing these reforms to be as unproductive of result as some of their predecessors have been. The Supreme Government and the Local Governments are equally confronted with an abuse which has attained to grave, and in some cases extravagant, dimensions, and which is injurious to the efficiency of both. Its remedy is, therefore, a common interest. A good practice is as capable of enduring as a bad practice, if it be given a fair start; and the Government of India feel confident that by a simultaneous and unremitting vigilance in the departments both of the Supreme and the Local Administrations, and by fidelity to the principles that have been or are about to be laid down, a serious obstacle to good government in India will be sensibly abridged, if not altogether removed.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to all Local Governments and Administrations for information and guidance; and that a copy be forwarded to the Departments of the Government of India for information and further necessary action, and to the officers subordinate to this Department for information and guidance.

[To High Court, Calcutta, by letter.]

Ordered also that the Resolution be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Simla, the 22nd May, 1900.

TELEGRAMS FOR THE TROOPS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

No. 9.—The following revised notification is published for general information :—

Until further notice, State and Private telegrams in plain language addressed to persons serving with the Field Force in South Africa will be accepted at Sender's risk, and charged for at the rate of R1-8 per word from offices in India or Burma. Telegrams in Code or Cypher cannot be accepted at this reduced rate. The address should consist of the following :—

(1) The name, or number, or both of the person to whom the telegram is addressed (in the case of officers the rank may be omitted, and in the case of telegrams for Non-Commissioned Officers and men the name may, in like manner, be omitted if the number is given. Such omissions, however, add to the risk of the telegram going astray, more especially when addressed to Non-Commissioned Officers and men), and

(2) The Regiment (this will be counted and charged for as one word irrespective of the number of words used).

These telegrams should be addressed "Bombay for South Africa" (which words will be signalled free), and not to any particular Telegraph Office in South Africa. The Bombay Telegraph Office will forward them to the Officer Commanding at Capetown, who will deliver them to the Addressees at whatever place in South Africa they may be stationed.

Senders of telegrams should accurately describe the Regiment, Battalion, Battery or Corps, to which the Addressees are attached, as it appears in the "Army List." For example: the address of an Officer or Private in the "Rifles" should give the number of the Battalion, and make it quite clear whether it is a Battalion of the "Rifle Brigade," the "King's Royal Rifle Corps," the "Royal Irish Rifles," or the "Scottish Rifles (Cameronians)."

The reduced rate will also apply to telegrams addressed to members of the Nursing Staff serving in South Africa, and any telegrams addressed to a Nurse will be treated in the same way as those intended for soldiers and sailors.

Telegrams for officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men in South Africa who are known to be suffering from wounds or sickness may be addressed to them as if they were with their regiment or corps. Such telegrams, on arrival at the place where the regiment or corps is stationed, will be redirected to the proper hospital.

When, however, the name of the hospital is known to the sender of the message, he may address the telegram direct to that hospital, e.g., "Field Hospital, 1st Cavalry Brigade," or to "No. 2 General Hospital" or to "Mooi River Hospital."

In any case, the telegram should, as already stated, be addressed by the sender to "Bombay for South Africa," which words will not be charged for.

The following are given as examples of addresses and counting :—

"Captain Armstrong, 64th Royal Field Artillery, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "Captain Armstrong, Wynberg Hospital, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "7303 Murphy, 2nd Battalion, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, Bombay for South Africa" (three words); "7303, Mooi River Hospital, Bombay for South Africa" (two words).

No. 37.—The British Government announces that the transmission of Private Telegrams for the Orange River Colony and the Transvaal, vid Cape Colony and Natal, is now suspended.

Telegrams for Pretoria, Johannesburg, Vereeniging, Germiston, Middelburg, Heidelberg, and Standerton are, meanwhile, being accepted for transmission, viâ Lourenco Marques, at the usual rates. These telegrams should be written in plain English, and will be accepted only at the risk of the sender. They are also subject to censorship and to delay in transmission.

TELEGRAMS FOR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS OF THE BRITISH AND INDIAN FORCES IN CHINA.

No. 43.—The following revised Notification is issued for general information :—

Until further notice, private telegrams, in plain language, for members of the British or Indian Military and Naval Forces in China, from their friends in India or Burma will be accepted at sender's risk and at the reduced rates mentioned below to the three following stations only, viâ Madras :—

1. To Shanghai at R 0-15-0 per word.
2. „ Weihaiwei „ 1-3-0 „
3. „ Taku „ 1-4-0 „

In the Official Instructions the words "Reduced Rates" should be inserted, and will be signalled free.

Telegrams intended for Military or Naval members stationed at Hongkong should be addressed to Shanghai, and those for members stationed at Tientsin or Peking should be addressed to Taku. These reduced rates will also apply to telegrams for Civilians in Military or Naval employ in China.

In the address the name and number of the Regiment, Battalion, Battery, or Corps will be counted and charged for as one word, irrespective of the number of words used. For instance, in a telegram addressed to "Capt. Brown, 23rd Field Battery, Royal Artillery, Shanghai," the number of words to be charged for will be four only, instead of eight words, as

II. Notification No. 34, dated the 22nd November, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

Calcutta, the 7th March, 1901.

No. 47.—The following revised notification is published for general information :—

The Post Master General, London, announces that the British Government have decided to suspend at Aden and the Cape of Good Hope the transmission of all telegrams in Code or cipher, whether of Foreign Governments or private persons, to or from British Central Africa, St. Helena and Ascension. Telegrams in plain language are subject to censorship, and can only be accepted at the risk of the sender.

Code messages for the following places, viz., Cape Colony, Natal, Rhodesia, Zanzibar, Seychelles, Mauritius, Madagascar, British and German East Africa, Mozambique and Lourenco Marques may, however, be accepted, if the words used are in one or other of the followin Code Books, which have been deposited wit the authorities at Aden, viz. :—

(3) Scott's (9th edition).
(4) A I.
(5) Telegraphenschluessel of W. Staudt and O. Hundius (published by Julius Springer at Berlin).
(6) The Mercuur Code (2nd edition), enlarged and revised, with the First Supplement.
(8) Western Union Telegraphic Code and International Cable Directory, Universal Edition, 1900.
(10) Atlantic Cable Directory of registered addresses and Directory Code, 1900.
(11) Watkin's Telegraphic Code with Appendix (17th edition), 1900.
(12) International Mercantile Telegraph Code (Meyer), 1880.
(13) The General, Commercial, and Mining Telegram Code, 1897, by C. A. Moreing and F C. McCutcheon.
(14) Bedford McNeill's Mining and General Telegraphic Code 1899.

Telegrams should be endorsed to the effect that the words used actually represent the corresponding expressions given in the above named Code Books.

As delays occur at Aden in consequence of the difficulty of determining which Code has been employed, senders of telegrams to the above-named places in East and South Africa should write on the message draft the name of the Code employed. For instance A B C; A Z; Scott's; A I; Staudt; Mercuur; Broomhall's; Directory; Atlantic, 1898, Atlantic, 1900; Watkin's; Meyer; McCutcheon; or McNeill. This information will be included in the "Official Instructions" and transmitted free of charge.

II. Notification No. 39, dated the 13th December, 1900, is hereby cancelled.

No. 47-A.—In the event of the establishment in British India of a censorship over telegrams, the first twelve Code Books mentioned in Notification No. 47, dated the 7th of March, 1901, will be used in India for purposes similar to that for which they are employed in Aden.

The public are recommended to provide themselves with such of the Codes as may appear suited to their requirements.

SURVEY OF INDIA DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

Calcutta, the 28th February 1901.

THE following rules and regulations relating to the Mathematical Instrument Office are published for the information and guidance of public officers.

F. B. LONGE, Major, R.E.,
Assistant Surveyor-General,
In charge Surveyor-General's Office.

OF THE

MATHEMATICAL INSTRUMENT OFFICE, SURVEY OF INDIA DEPARTMENT.

THE mathematical Instrument Office, Survey of India Department, supplies new and serviceable instruments, etc., and repairs, examines, and adjusts, etc., old ones, on book-debit, for all branches of the public service. As a general rule, new instruments are not supplied, if serviceable instruments of the class required are available for issue.

2. All applications for instruments on the public service must be submitted on the following indent form, which is not required in duplicate, the specification of instruments and particular purposes for which required being made as full as possible. Indent forms may be had on application to the Mathematical Instrument Office:—

Indent No. on the Calcutta Mathematical Instrument Office, S. I. Dept., for Instruments required for the use of , dated 190 .

Description of Instruments.	Quantity or number in use or in store.	Quantity or number indented for.	Purpose for which required.	Average cost as per printed list.	How and where to be despatched.
				Rs. As.	The address which should be affixed to the parcels or cases, to be distinctly given in full. Abbreviations sometimes lead to mistakes.

I do hereby certify that the articles specified in this indent are indispensably necessary for the purposes set forth, according to the best of my knowledge and belief, after the most careful examination.

Recommended.

3. All indents, before they can be supplied, must be duly approved and countersigned by the heads of departments, or of the Government under which indenting officers may be serving, viz. :—

State Railways,	,, Engineers-in-Chief,
Other Departments,	,, Heads of Departments, and they should be addressed to the Officer in charge Government Mathematical Instrument Office, No. 15, Wood Street, Calcutta.

4. The mode of transit, and address, or station to which the instruments are to be consigned, must invariably be specified on indents in the proper column. Indents should not be accompanied with forwarding letters, unless more explanation is necessary than can be given on the face of the indent.

5. All officers, to whom instruments and other stores are issued on public service, have to account for them to the officer to whom their accounts are rendered, in such manner as may be by him directed.

6. All instruments, and component parts of instruments, when no longer required, should be at once returned to the Mathematical Instrument Office, except when the Officer in charge considers that their transit charges may nearly equal or exceed, their actual value as material, in which case he should refer to the Officer in charge Mathematical Instrument Office for instruction as to their disposal. No unused instruments should be allowed to accumulate in any office, as if returned, they can be utilised for re-issue.

7. When instruments are considered unserviceable by any officer, a survey should be held on them by a committee of Government officers, whose reports should be forwarded to the Assistant Surveyor-General in charge of Mathematical Instrument Office, who will issue instructions as to which of the articles are to be forwarded to the depôt, Calcutta, and which should be sold by public auction to the best advantage. The proceeds of all articles sold by auction must be deposited in the nearest treasury, and treasury receipt, with auction account sale, and copy of the committee report, should be attached to the next cash account current, in which the transaction should appear both on the debit and credit sides.†

8. When instruments, the value of which exceeds Rs. 50, are received for final deposit in store, a valuation receipt will be granted for them by the Officer in charge Mathematical Instrument Office, to enable officers, returning them, to remove them from their debit, by forwarding the receipt to the Comptroller of India Treasuries or other audit officer with the half-yearly or other returns for stores submitted to him. If the value of the instruments returned does not exceed Rs. 50, a valuation statement is granted and the matter is adjusted by cash payment, in the month following that in which the instruments are received, except in the case of officers of the Survey of India Department, Government of India Secretariats, and officers in Berar.

9. All Government instruments, etc., requiring repair, etc., should be forwarded with an official letter, stating the nature of the repair required. A special requisition form for repairs can be supplied by this office on application.

10. All instruments, etc., received from England and issued on book-debit in the public service, will be charged at their invoice cost, plus a percentage to cover freight, insurance, loss by exchange, etc.

11. In the event of instruments, indented for by Government officers, not being in stock at the Mathematical Instrument Office, they will, if urgently required, be purchased by that office in the local market.

12. Instruments made in the workshops, and those purchased locally for issue on book-debit, will be charged at cost rates. Instruments purchased locally for officers not entitled to receive them on book-debit will be charged at cost price, plus 5 to 10 per cent. for examining, testing, and incidental charges.

* NOTE.—Includes the principal Forest Officers in Coorg, the Andamans, and in Baluchistan, and the Commissioner of Ajmer-Marwara in Ajmer.

† NOTE.—It seldom pays to return chains to store, and as a rule they should be disposed of locally and the proceeds credited to Government in the nearest treasury merely informing the Mathematical Instrument Office.

13. Instruments, when they can be spared, are sometimes sold to officers in the service of Government on payment of their value plus from 5 to 10 per cent., and instruments, the private property of officers, can be repaired on like terms. In such cases the amount must be remitted to the Officer in charge Mathematical Instrument Office before the instruments can be despatched.

14. Instruments returned into store will be valued according to their condition on arrival at the Mathematical Instrument Office.*

15. It should be distinctly stated in the forwarding letters, or on the face of delivery vouchers, advising despatch of consignments to the Mathematical Instrument Office, whether the articles forwarded are "for repair" or "for deposit."

16. All consignments for the Mathematical Instrument Office should be forwarded "prepaid" and that office does not pay the freight on instruments despatched by it.

17. Instruments are issued and repaired on book-debit for officers and departments entitled thereto when the cost exceeds Rs. 50. When the cost is not more than Rs. 50, cash payment is required and may be made either by Remittance Transfer Receipts, Money Orders, Cheques payable in Calcutta to the Officer in charge Mathematical Instrument Office, or cash. In no case should money be paid into the Local Treasuries, and their receipts forwarded in payment of bills.

18. In the case of book-debit transactions, invoices are sent out in triplicate, one copy to be signed and returned as a voucher for the charge, and the others to be used by the indenting officer in accordance with paragraph 96, Chap. VI, Vol. I, Civil Account Code.

19. When cash payment is required, the Mathematical Instrument Office sends an invoice and a bill. The invoice should be signed by the indenting officer and returned to the Mathematical Instrument Office, and the bill should be paid as explained above, when a receipt in proper form will be issued by the Officer in charge Mathematical Instrument Office.

20. It is particularly requested that the size and description of instruments, lengths of scales (how divided, and purposes for which required), and generally any information which will guide this Office in knowing, without further reference, the exact wants of the indenting officer, be entered on the face of the indent, instead of in covering letters.

21. The annexed list gives the nomenclature of the various instruments ordinarily kept in store in this Office for issue on public service, which should be strictly adhered to in all indents.

22. To enable the indenting officer, as well as the officer who countersigns and finally passes an indent, to know the cost involved thereby, the average ordinary price of each description of instrument is also given in the list. Indenting officers should invariably enter the value of all instruments required by them in the column of the indent allotted for that purpose. The lower prices are those of instruments which, although perfectly serviceable, are not new (see paragraph 1).

23. Indents should be regulated, not according to what an officer would like to have, but by what is absolutely necessary.

24. For the rules for the supply, repair, return, and adjustment of cost of mathematical instruments supplied to corps, units, and field staff offices for mobilisation in accordance with the Field Service Equipment Tables, see G. O. C. C., No. 158, dated 5th March 1900.

(1) Unless the Collector farms the right of retail sale under rule 12, licenses for the retail sale of opium, other than preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking, or of poppy-heads, or of both, may be granted by the Collector, for one year only, unless the Chief Commissioner otherwise specially directs.

(2) The Commissioner may from time to time fix the number of shops for which licenses may be granted under sub-rule (1), and the exclusive right to sell opium, other than preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking, or poppy-heads, or both, by retail at these shops may be put up to auction by the Collector at or before the commencement of each official year, either for each shop singly or for groups of shops as the Collector, subject to the control of the Commissioner, sees fit.

(3) The conditions of the auction mentioned in sub-rule (2) may be such that the sum payable in respect of the shop or shops, as the case may be, by the person declared to be the purchaser at the auction shall be paid by that person in such instalments and at such times, and that such security may be required from him for the payment thereof, as, subject to any instructions that may be issued by the Chief Commissioner in this behalf, the Collector in each case directs:

Provided that in the rural area, that is to say, in the area other than that included in the Ajmer, Beawar, Nasirabad and Kekri areas, the right to sell opium, other than preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking, or poppy-heads, or both, by retail may be granted in given areas to approved persons on the payment of such annual fee per shop as the Commissioner may from time to time determine.

Such fee shall be paid in a lump sum before the license is granted. The grants of licenses under this proviso may be made by the Collector with the Commissioner's approval. The areas and shops to which this proviso shall apply may be fixed by the Collector, three months before the

Cancellation of license for retail sale.

9. (1) A license granted under the last foregoing rule or proviso may be cancelled without compensation by the Collector for breach of any of the conditions of the license.

(2) Where the Collector considers that any such license should be cancelled for any cause other than a breach of its conditions, he shall remit a sum equal to the average amount payable for fifteen days of the period for which the license was granted, and shall either give fifteen days' previous notice of his intention to cancel the license or, in addition to remitting the sum aforesaid, make such compensation for default of notice as the Commissioner directs.

On the expiration of the notice, or on the payment of the additional compensation, the Collector may cancel the license.

Surrender of licenses for retail sale.

10. (1) A licensed vendor may surrender his license on the expiration of one month's previous notice given by him in writing to the Collector, or, in the case of a license granted by a farmer, to the farmer, with the Collector's approval, of his intention to surrender the same, and on payment of such sum as the Collector may fix in this behalf, not exceeding the average amount payable for six months of the period for which the license was granted, or, where the license is granted for a shorter period than one year, then for half that period.

(2) If the Collector is satisfied that there is sufficient reason for surrendering a license, he may, with the sanction of the Commissioner, remit the sum so fixed.

Withdrawal of licenses.

11. The Collector may at any time, with or without cause assigned, and without payment of compensation, withdraw a license from a licensed druggist.

Farm of right of retail sale.

12. (1) The Collector may let in farm the exclusive right of retail sale of opium, other than preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking, or poppy-heads, or both, within any local area fixed by the Commissioner:—

(2) When the exclusive right of retail sale is let in farm, the farmer may, subject to the conditions of his farm, himself sell by retail or issue licenses under the counter-signature of the Collector for the retail sale of opium, other than preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking, or poppy-heads, or both, as the case may be, within the local area to which the farm extends.

(3) Every farmer shall file in the Collector's office a list of all licenses granted by him in such form, and on such day or days in each year, as the Commissioner may from time to time prescribe.

Issue of instructions with respect to farm.

13. The Chief Commissioner may from time to time issue instructions with respect to—

(a) the invitation and acceptance of tenders for farms under the last foregoing rule; and

Interference with farms.

14. (1) The Collector may, with the leave of the authority by which a farm under rule 12 was sanctioned, cancel the farm, or, within the term of the farm, make or impose such reservations or restrictions with respect to the grant of licenses as to him may seem fit.

(2) If the farm is cancelled for any breach of its conditions, the farmer shall not be entitled to compensation for any loss he may sustain thereby.

(3) If the farm is cancelled for any cause other than a breach of its conditions, or if any reservation or restriction with respect to the grant of licenses is made or imposed within the term of the farm, the farmer shall be entitled to receive for any loss which he sustains thereby such compensation as the Chief Commissioner may determine.

Power to prescribe forms.

15. The Chief Commissioner may from time to time prescribe—

(a) the forms and conditions in and on which licenses and farms shall be granted by the Collector, and licenses by farmers; and

(b) forms for any other proceedings under these rules for which he considers that forms should be provided.

Disposal of articles remaining with a farmer or licensed vendor after expiration of his farm or license.

16. If a person who has been a farmer or a licensed vendor has in his possession, after the expiration of his farm or license, any opium, other than preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking, or poppy-heads which he is unable to dispose of under rule 6 or rule 7, he shall, on the requisition of the Collector, surrender the same to such officer as the Collector may appoint in this behalf; and the person to whom a new farm or license has been granted in the stead of the said farmer or licensed vendor, or if no such new farm or license has been granted, then any farmer or licensed vendor of the article within the district, shall on the requisition of the Collector be bound, under penalty, if the Collector sees fit, of forfeiting his farm or license, to buy the opium or poppy-heads, as the case may be, at such price as the Collector may adjudge, and in any quantity not exceeding that which the Collector may determine to be ordinarily saleable by him in two months:

Provided that, if such opium or poppy-heads, or any part thereof, is declared by the Civil Surgeon or other officer authorised in that behalf by the Chief Commissioner to be unfit for use, the Collector shall cause the same to be destroyed, and no compensation in respect of such destruction shall be claimable by the former farmer or licensed vendor.

CHAPTER III.

IMPORT, EXPORT AND TRANSPORT.

17. The Government may import, export or transport opium and poppy-heads on its own account.

18. Any person may personally import, export or transport opium of which he is entitled under rule 5, sub-rule (1), to be lawfully in possession, and subject to the limits laid down in that rule, viz., up to 5 tolas of opium, 8 seers of poppy-heads, and 1 tola of preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking; and to this extent no pass shall be required.

19. (1) The import of opium, other than preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking, and poppy-heads in quantities exceeding those specified in rule 5, sub-rule (1), may be permitted under a pass granted by the Collector, and by such routes and subject to such conditions as may be prescribed in the pass:

Import.

Provided that import by rail may be so permitted by such railway stations only as may, from time to time, be prescribed by the Chief Commissioner in that behalf.

(2) Opium or poppy-heads imported into Ajmer-Merwara under sub-rule (1) may be detained on arrival at the place of destination until such time as the consignment has been examined by an official authorised by the Collector in that behalf. No opium or poppy-heads imported by rail shall be delivered to the consignee until the examining officer has given to the stationmaster a written certificate that the examination has been made.

20. The export of opium, other than preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking, and poppy-heads in quantities exceeding those specified in rule 5, sub-rule (1), may be permitted (under a pass granted by the Collector on the production of a written permission granted by the Political Agent of a Native State, or an official of such State duly authorised in that behalf, or a District Officer of British India) by such routes and subject to such conditions as may be prescribed in the pass:

Export.

(1) Export by rail may be permitted from the Ajmer railway station only.

(2) Opium, other than preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking, may be exported to or through British India only when covered by a pass signed by the Opium Agent of Indore, or by the Opium Agent of Ajmer, or by an officer authorized by one of these Agents to sign the pass, and under the conditions and restrictions prescribed in the schedule to these rules.

(3) No opium shall be exported to the Punjab except under pass by the Opium Agent of Ajmer, or by an officer authorized by him in that behalf.

(4) Upon opium exported to or through British India from Ajmer there shall be payable a duty at such rate or rates as may from time to time be prescribed by the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India.

21. The transport of opium other than preparations or admixtures of opium used for smoking, and poppy-heads in quantities exceeding those specified in rule 5, sub-rule (1), may be permitted under a pass granted by the Collector and subject to the conditions contained therein.

Transport.

22. (1) When accompanied by a properly authenticated pass issued by the Opium Agent of Indore or his authorised Assistant, or by the Opium Agent at Ajmer or other officer authorised to grant passes at the Ajmer scales, certifying prepayment of the duty leviable at the scales, (or by any Political Officer or Native State official duly authorised in this behalf), opium or poppy-heads in transit through Ajmer-Merwara may be transported by such route and under such conditions as may be prescribed in the pass:

Provided that transit through Ajmer-Merwara of opium consigned to the Punjab shall not be permitted unless the opium has been booked by rail from Ajmer, and under pass as required in the third proviso to rule 20.

(3) The destination of a consignment shall not be altered from that which has been specified in the pass.

(4) Delivery of opium or poppy-heads in transit by rail shall not be taken from the railway authorities by the owner or consignor or consignee or by any other person without the written authority of the Collector.

(5) Opium or poppy-heads in transit may be detained and examined as to all particulars specified in the pass, or as to the prepayment of duty, or as to tampering in transit or change of destination of the consignment, or as to the due observance of these rules at any station or place at which the Collector may direct such detention or examination either generally or specially. The railway officials shall afford at all times all reasonable facilities to the Government official or officials authorised in writing by the Collector to make such general or special examinations, and on the requisition of such Government official or officials shall detain any consignment pending the orders of the Collector, and shall be indemnified for acting on such requisition.

CHAPTER IV.

DISPOSAL OF THINGS CONFISCATED.

Disposal of confiscated things.

23. (1) All things confiscated under the Opium Act, 1878, except poppy, poppy-heads and opium, shall be disposed of by the Collector by public auction.

(2) Poppy and poppy-heads so confiscated shall be disposed of as the Collector may direct.

(3) Opium so confiscated shall be sent for examination to the Civil Surgeon or other officer authorised in that behalf by the Chief Commissioner, and if declared by him to be fit for use, shall be disposed of in such manner as the Collector may direct. If the opium is declared by the officer aforesaid to be unfit for use, it shall immediately be destroyed.

CHAPTER V.

REWARDS.

Reward in case of fine.

24. (1) A Magistrate convicting an offender under section 9 of the Opium Act, 1878, may award to any person who has contributed in any way to the conviction the whole or any portion of any fine imposed upon the offender and paid by him or realised from his property.

(2) If the fine is not realised, or only realised in part, the Magistrate may, within a limit of one hundred rupees, order payment of its full amount or of the unrealised balance, as the case may be, out of the Treasury.

(3) If the Magistrate is of opinion that a larger reward than he can give under this rule to a person who has contributed to the conviction ought to be given to that person, he may move the Chief Commissioner through the Collector to grant a larger reward.

Rewards in case of confiscation.

25. A Magistrate or other officer ordering the confiscation of anything under section 12 of the Opium Act, 1878, may grant to any person who has contributed in any way to the seizure of the thing the whole or any portion of the value thereof.

Rewards in other cases.

26. (1) In any case in which, in the opinion of the Chief Commissioner, a person has performed service of special merit in respect of the prevention or detection of an offence against the Opium Act, 1878, the Chief Commissioner may grant him a reward not exceeding five hundred rupees in amount.

(2) The Chief Commissioner, or, with his sanction, the Commissioner, may incur expenditure not exceeding five hundred rupees in each case for the employment of informers, or for any other purpose connected with the prevention or detection of offences against the Opium Act, 1878.

CHAPTER VI.

APPEAL AND REVISION.

Appeal.

27. An appeal shall lie to the Commissioner from every order of the Collector under these rules, if presented to the Commissioner, or to the Collector for transmission to the Commissioner, within thirty days from the date of the order.

Revision.

28. The Chief Commissioner may revise every order passed by the Collector or the Commissioner under these rules.

Form of petition.

29. A petition of appeal from, or for revision of, an order shall be accompanied by the order in original or by an authenticated copy thereof, or the omission to produce the original or copy shall be explained.

SCHEDULE.

(Rule 20.)

1. The Rajputana-Malwa Railway Administration shall not receive opium for export except under a pass and in whole or half chests.

2. The amount of duty payable on export will be paid into the Treasury either in cash or by hundi, and the Treasury Officer will give the person tendering payment a receipt for the amount so paid. On production of the receipt, the number of chests for which duty has been paid will be admitted into the godown.

3. Hundis will, on being approved of by the Treasury Officer, be registered and numbered, and be endorsed on the reverse side with the name of the person on whom they are drawn; they will be forwarded by the Treasury Officer under sealed and registered cover, if the opium is for export by sea, direct to the Accountant General, Bombay; and, if it is not for export by sea, to the officer mentioned in the pass to whom the Treasury Officer may be directed to forward it. The register will be in the following form:—

(2) Date of pass.
(4) Consecutive number of hundi.
(5) Date of hundi.
(6) By whom drawn.
(7) On whom drawn.
(8) At how many days' sight.
(9) When due.

4. To facilitate check, passes will bear the same number as the hundis, and these numbers will be entered in column I—"Number of pass." The total in column "Total amount of duty" will be the total for each continuation register, and will be carried forward into the next, and number of passes so entered in the first column will be distinctly specified in the advice sent to the Accountant General.

5. A duplicate of this register, if the export is to be by sea, will be sent to the Collector of Customs and Opium, Bombay, or if the export is by land, to the officer to whom the hundi has been sent under paragraph 3 of this schedule.

6. Opium intended for export by sea or for home consumption in India shall be brought to the Government godown ready packed in chests or half-chests (as may be most convenient) by the merchants or brokers who will produce the Treasury Officer's certificate under his signature for cash or his receipt for hundis on stamped paper payable at sight to the Bombay General Treasury and Bank of Bombay.

The Deputy or Assistant Opium Agent will carefully inspect the Treasury Officer's signature to the certificate, and note the serial number of the receipt to satisfy himself that the receipts are genuine.

The duty on opium intended for consumption in India must be paid in cash or by approved hundis into some Treasury in British India, and the receipt of the Treasury Officer must be produced.

7. The chests or half-chests of each party will be placed in the opium godown and will have their covers printed and stamped, and each chest or half-chest will then be numbered consecutively in English.

8. Merchants will themselves provide and pay for porters, carpenters and men for marking the chests and serving up the covers of such chests as have been opened for weighment; they will also pay all expenses of conveying their chests to the railway station and of transit thence to their destination.

9. The Collector shall annually, before the weighment of the opium of the season is begun, examine the weights and scales and report the result of the examination to the Commissioner. No weights or scales shall be used which on any such examination have not been found to be strictly accurate.

10. It will be the duty of the officer in charge of the scales to see that the opium is weighed fairly with an even beam. The practice of taking excess weight for the purpose of trimming the scales, or as an allowance for dryage and wastage, is strictly prohibited.

11. The Deputy or Assistant Opium Agent will select at hazard any chest he pleases (never less than two chests or half-chests out of every 10) and as many more as he thinks fit; each selected chest will then be separately opened, its contents (opium balls called bathis or golis) brought to the scales, the exact weight recorded; and from these weighments the average of the whole lot may be struck. If the weight is in excess of the 140¼ lbs. allowed by the Government in each whole chest, the surplus may be withdrawn, the object being to prevent a larger quantity than the amount allowed in a chest being exported under the pass. The officer who supervises weighment is to see that the surplus quantity of the whole of any batch is taken out of the opened chests and put aside somewhere near him under his eyes until the chests are repacked and nailed down. If the weight is under 140¼ lbs. and the owner has spare opium to make up the deficit, he may be allowed to supply it to make up the full weight, and the chests will then be nailed down in the presence of the officer in charge of the scales. If the owner is not able to make up the deficiency, the amount deficient will be noted in the pass.

12. During the process of weighing, the chaprasis of the opium establishment shall vigilantly watch the merchants and their servants.

13. This operation is called the "net weighment of the opium," and when completed, the boxes shall be repacked and nailed down; then the gross weighment of each chest or half-chest shall be ascertained and recorded, and the gross weight marked on the covers in English with the serial number of the chest and such other particulars as may be necessary for the identification of the consignment.

14. The chests exported during one season, which begins on the 1st August, shall bear a continuous serial number.

15. Full particulars shall be entered in the pass for each consignment, showing:—

On the first side of pass.	(1) Number of pass. (2) Name of owner of the chest. (3) Number of chests. (4) Amount of duty. (5) Amount of duty paid in cash at Ajmer. (6) Amount of duty to be realised on hundi. (7) Rate of duty. (8) Date of Government orders. (9) Date of pass. (10) Signature of the officer by whom the pass was granted and who made the weighments.
On the second side.	Net weighment of opium of certain chests selected from the whole consignment.
On the third side.	Gross weighment of every chest, its contents and destination.

16. A duplicate of each pass granted shall be sent to the officer who issued the permit authorising the export of the opium mentioned in the pass.

17. This pass shall remain in force only, in the case of export by sea, till the arrival of the consignment in Bombay and, in the case of export by land, for three months from the date of the issue thereof.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following final Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for th Regulation and Inspection of Mines was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 8th March, 1901 :—

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to provide for the Regulation and Inspection of Mines was referred, have considered the Bill (No. II) and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as finally amended by us annexed thereto.

2 In reconsidering the provisions of the Bill we have had the assistance of our Hon'ble colleague Mr. Ashton, whose practical experience enabled him to suggest a number of alterations and improvements. We have done our best to meet the objections which were raised by owners of mines to the Bill as reported last year. On a review of the whole subject we came to the conclusion that the clauses dealing with the labour of women and children contain a good deal of unnecessary detail, and that they might cause difficulties if applied to mines where the labourers work in family gangs. We have omitted clause 9 (r) which contained an absolute prohibition of the employment of children; and we have altered the arrangement of the Bill so as to make it clear that women and children are not interfered with, except in so far as their own safety or the safety of others may render it necessary to deal with them. At the same time we are of opinion that the employment of women and children in mines, whether as members of family gangs or otherwise, is or may be attended by certain risks which may best be provided against by taking power to regulate and restrict, and if necessary to prohibit, such employment. We have given effect to this view of the matter by recasting a considerable portion of the Bill, as will appear from subsequent paragraphs of this Report.

3. We have given careful attention to the proposal that the Bill should be restricted in its operation to coal-mines, and that it should embody a code of rules framed somewhat on the model of the rules enacted by Parliament in the Coal Mines Act of 1887. We think the precedent is not one which can, with advantage, be adopted in India. The rules of the Act of 1887, and of previous Acts of Parliament dealing with the same subject-matter, represent the result of long experience of coal-mining. They prescribe in minute detail all the arrangements to be made in mines and they were framed by Government in consultation with owners and working miners. In this country the mining industry is still in an early stage of its development. We think it expedient that rules should be framed, as they are found to be required, by Government, acting in co-operation with the owners of the best-managed mines, and taking into account the wishes and habits of the people employed.

4. It must be admitted that rules embodied in an Act possess one important advantage. They appear in the Statute-book, and are thus brought to the notice of all persons concerned. In clause 4 we have inserted a new sub-clause (6) which will, we hope, render it easier for managers and others to obtain timely information in regard to the rules which they are required to obey.

5. With these preliminary observations, we proceed to explain the clauses of the Bill as now further amended.

6. In clause 3 we have added a few words to the definition of "agent" to make it clear that agents fall within the scope of the Act only in so far as they take part in the actual management of a mine. In the definition of "child" a majority of the Committee were of opinion that "twelve" should be substituted for "fourteen," and the sub-clause has been altered accordingly. We have restricted the definition of persons "employed" to those who work under appointment or with the knowledge of the manager. A few words have been struck out of the definition of "mine" in order to make it clear that an open pit may be dealt with in all cases where the workings extend beneath the superjacent ground.

7. In clause 4 we have provided that Inspectors shall be qualified by experience, and that Inspectors may be appointed for groups or classes of mines, as well as for local areas. The object of the new sub-clause (6) has already been explained.

8. In clause 6, which defines the powers of Inspectors, we have altered sub-clause (d) so as to give power to exclude or remove from a mine any person whose admission is dangerous to himself or others and added words requiring an order under the clause to be complied with until the decision of the appellate authority is received. We have also slightly altered the language of sub-clause (e).

9. Clauses 9 to 12 of the Bill as formerly reported have been struck out. So much of the substance of these clauses as we think it expedient to retain has been transferred to other parts of the Bill and will be mentioned in another part of this Report.

10. After the clauses which relate to Inspectors we have inserted the clauses now numbered 9 to 12, which provide for the appointment and powers of Mining Boards and Committees. By clause 9 the Local Government is empowered to constitute a Mining Board, which will advise the Government as to the exercise of its rule-making powers. It is intended that Mining Boards should be constituted, where the owners of mines desire to have them and where suitable persons can be found to serve. Clause 10, which is in part identical with clause 16 of the Bill reported last year, provides for the appointment of Commitees. We think it desirable that the Committee should be an impartial body, and have therefore provided that neither the Inspector nor any person employed in or in the management of the mine concerned shall serve upon it. Clauses 11 and 12 reproduce the substance of rules which it was proposed to apply to Committees and which we now propose to apply to Boards and Committees.

11. Clauses 13 and 14 have not been materially altered. Clause 15 (1) empowers an Inspector to give notice in regard to any mine, or any thing or practice in a mine, which is dangerous to human life or safety. We have added to this a sub-clause (2) which reproduces so much as we think it desirable to retain of clause 10 of the Bill as formerly reported. Under the new sub-clause an Inspector may prohibit the employment of women and children if such employment is immediately dangerous to the life or safety of the persons employed. The procedure to be followed in case objection is taken to the notice or order of an Inspector has been further elaborated with reference to the functions of Mining Boards and Committees. The clauses numbered 17 to 20 in the Bill reported last year, and now numbered 16 to 19, have not been materially altered.

12. The clause now numbered 20 contains the rule-making powers which Government may exercise under the proposed Act. We have added a sub-clause (b) relating to Boards and Committees, and two very important sub-clauses (l) and (m) which provide a substitute for the power given by clause 11 of the Bill as reported last year. We think the general power given by (l) and (m) will enable Government to take all such steps as may be necessary for the protection of women and children in mines. We have altered the language of the sub-clauses now lettered (t) and (u) to meet the objection of owners of mines who contended that the sub-clauses as previously worded were too wide. In the Bill, as formerly reported, previous publication was required as a safeguard against inconsiderate exercise of the rule-making power. We have preserved this requirement and have added a further safeguard by providing that rules are to be referred to the Mining Board before they are published for criticism.

13. We have made no material alteration in the clauses now numbered 21 to 27 inclusive. We propose to insert a new clause 28 reproducing, in a simpler form, clause 12 of the Bill as reported last year. We also propose to insert a new clause now numbered 32, enabling the Governor General in Council to exercise any power which is by the Act conferred upon a Local Government.

15. The changes which we propose to make in the Bill are numerous and important, but they are all in the direction of relaxing the stringency of its provisions, and of introducing additional safeguards against hasty or unwise use of the powers which it confers. For this reason we are of opinion that the Bill has not been so altered as to require republication, and we recommend that it be passed as now further amended by us.

* Subject to separate note.

I CONSIDER that the Bill as now amended is an improvement on the Bill which was republished last session, and may be accepted in its amended form by mine-owners. In so far, however, as it purports to deal with every class of mine throughout the vast continent of India, there may be objections to some clauses which I do not foresee; and, as the Bill is not to be republished for criticism, I sign the Report with the reservation that I may still take objection to some of the clauses to which I have given my endorsement.

ALLAN ARTHUR.

I CONSIDER that the need for legislation for the coal-mines of Bengal has not been proved, and that, therefore, legislation is undesirable; that it is not possible to incorporate in one Act legislation which will work satisfactorily in all classes of mines in a country of such varying character as India; and that the effort to do this by rules is undesirable and likely to lead to trouble in the future.

If, however, it be conceded—

(1) that coal-mines must be regulated by legislation,

(2) that this legislation must be carried out by the medium of a Mines Act for all India,

I concur in the opinions expressed by the Hon'ble Sir Allan Arthur. As there has been no time for general criticism of the amended Bill, I sign the Report with the same reservation as that made by the Hon'ble Sir Allan Arthur.

(5) On receiving an objection made under sub-section (4) the said Board or other authority shall refer the matter to a Committee.

(7) Nothing in this section shall affect the powers of a Magistrate under section 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

[Cf. ibid., 13.]

Notice to be given of accidents.

17. When any accidental explosion occurs in a mine, or when any accident occurs in or at a mine, causing loss of life or serious bodily injury, the owner, agent or manager of the mine shall give such notice of the explosion or accident to such authorities, in such form, and within such time, as may be prescribed.

[Cf. 50 & 51 Vict., c. 58, s. 45.]

Power for the Government to order formal inquiry into accidents.

18. (1) When in or at any mine an explosion or other accident has occurred, if it appears to the Governor General in Council or the Local Government that a formal inquiry into the causes of, and circumstances attending, the accident ought to be held, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may give directions accordingly, and may appoint a competent person to hold the inquiry, and may also appoint any person or persons possessing legal or special knowledge to act as assessor or assessors in holding the inquiry.

(2) The person or persons so appointed shall have all the powers of a Civil Court for the purpose of enforcing the attendance of witnesses and compelling the production of documents; and every person required by such person or persons as aforesaid to furnish any information shall be deemed to be legally bound to do so within the meaning of section

XLV of 1860. 176 of the Indian Penal Code.

[Cf. 50 & 51 Vict., c. ss. 52-54.

(2) If any such owner, agent or manager—

(a) fails within a period of two months after the receipt of a notice from the Inspector or Chief Inspector to transmit a draft of such special rules as are referred to in sub-section (1), or

the Inspector or Chief Inspector may either—

(i) propose a draft of such special rules as appear to him to be sufficient, or

(ii) propose such amendments in the draft submitted to him by the owner, agent or manager as will, in his opinion, render them sufficient, and shall send such draft rules or draft amendments to the owner, agent or manager for consideration.

(3) If within a period of two months from the date on which any draft rules or draft amendments are sent by the Inspector or Chief Inspector to the owner, agent or manager of a mine under the provisions of sub-section (2), the Inspector or Chief Inspector and the owner, agent or manager are unable to agree as to the terms of the special rules to be made under sub-section (1) or as to the terms of any of such rules, the said Inspector or Chief Inspector shall refer the draft rules for settlement to the Mining Board or, where there is no Mining Board, to such officer or authority as the Local Government may, by general or special order, appoint in this behalf.

Provided that the Local Government may at any time, by order in writing, which shall be published in like manner as aforesaid, rescind, in whole or in part, any rules so made, and that thereupon such rules shall cease to have effect accordingly.

INDIAN FOREST (AMENDMENT) BILL.

CENTRAL PROVINCES CIVIL COURTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RALEIGH moved that the Bill further to amend the law relating to Civil Courts in the Central Provinces be taken into consideration.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. RALEIGH moved that in the new proviso proposed to be added by clause 4 of the Bill the words "or parts of districts" be omitted. He said:—"The object of this Bill was explained on its introduction. The Bill has been referred to the Government of the Central Provinces and it has been approved: but the Divisional Judge of Nagpur points out that, under the proposed section 6, the civil division consists of one or more complete districts and that the words in the proviso 'or parts of districts' are unnecessary, and I move that the words be omitted."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. RALEIGH moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS BILL.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU moved that the Bill to amend Act XX of 1863 (an Act to enable the Government to divest itself of the management of Religious Endowments) be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir Charles Rivaz, the Hon'ble Mr. Raleigh, the Hon'ble Kunwar Sir Harnam Singh, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. K. Bose, the Hon'ble Mr. Smeaton, the Hon'ble Rai Sri Ram Bahadur and the mover. He said:—"In placing before the Council the motion that stands in my name, I beg leave to make a few brief explanatory remarks.

"One proposal I have made is to do away with the distinction under which certain temples, mosques and other religious institutions fall under the control of the Committees and others do not. In other words, the difference that has been made between section 3 and section 4 must cease. That distinction proceeds virtually on the assumption that the thing to be safeguarded was, not the trust-property or the object worshipped, but the trustee, to whom—speaking strictly—they are merely confided. It looks as though the trustee had an inherent, inalienable and personal right, over-riding the claims of the object of worship and its endowments. It cannot be too strongly emphasised, I venture to think, that the public and the vast body of worshippers are interested in the question how the institutions are maintained and their property looked after—not in the question how a trustee derives or has derived his title. Yet the Act now in force has proceeded as if the latter of these questions was the paramount one. How this has come about is easily told.

"In the early part of the century that has just expired, the then Government considered it a part of their duty to exercise control, more or less, over one and all temples, mosques and other religious institutions in the country as well as over all endowments for charity. To realise this one has only to read the preambles and the provisions of Madras Regulation VII of 1817, and the kindred pieces of legislation in other parts, and the judgment of the Madras High Court at p. 52, Vol. V of its Reports. For nearly a quarter of a century since then, I may say the strong arm and the vigilant eye of the local representatives of the Government were extended over, and were felt by, all the institutions, whether the nomination of the trustee was or was not in the hands of the Government. In the beginning of the forties which followed, a change came over the spirit of the Government—a change which was unfortunate so far as it regarded the interests of the institutions—a change, the cause and the motive of which it is as purposeless as unprofitable to dwell upon here. Suffice it to say that the change was prompted, neither by any notion of thereby advancing the good of the institutions nor by any revised or refined ideas as to the strict functions of the State. I wish I could give some extracts from the mass of correspondence which the change led to; but I do not propose to trouble the Council with them. I may, however, say this, that there are indications in that correspondence showing how the change of policy—at any rate, the expediency of it—was not readily acquiesced in by at least a few of the Government officers who were in close touch with the institutions and their worshippers and were thus capable of fully grasping the exact situation. It is worthy of note, in this connection, that, so far as I know, no complaint of any sort or kind on the part of the worshippers, or any persons representing them or claiming to represent them, was made to evoke or precipitate that change of policy. All other considerations were absolutely subordinated to the single idea which was in the ascendant, viz., the idea that the Government and their officers should finally and effectually abdicate the attitude of that control which, as a fact, they had till then maintained. I, for one, have no quarrel with this stern and irrevocable resolve. I heartily approve of it. But the pity of it is that the Act which was to give effect to that resolve was not passed at once, but was delayed for over twenty years, i.e., till 1863. If an Act was passed immediately when the change of policy was determined upon, the machinery, such as it is, which was embodied in the later legislative measure, would have, in all probability, embraced the supervision of nearly all of them or the bulk of them, as they were then under the actual control of the Government. But during the twenty and odd years which intervened, steps were executively taken which bereft some of the richest institutions of even the merest semblance of check and preventive control, such as the temples at Tripati and Trivellore. It goes without saying that, taking the average human nature for what it is, it is the inevitable tendency of unchecked freedom to fast degenerate into unbridled license. The aim of my proposal in question is to minimise, if not to neutralise, the disastrous results that have followed and to make better provision for the future. I have no sympathy with those who talk of vested interests in matters of this sort. If there is one office more than another, whose retention is or ought to be dependent on good behaviour, it is, I venture to think, the administration of sacred institutions. As I have had repeatedly to say, there can be no vested interest in doing wrong.

"The only objection, with an air of seriousness, which has been urged against my proposal is that many a zamindar or rich land-holder is the trustee of temples within his estate, and often spends his own money, over and above their income, and that it would be both wounding his dignity and doing him wrong to subject him to supervision of persons, much his inferiors. I know there are many zamindars who are all they ought to be and who are laudably open-handed as above described. Being what they are, they should be foremost (I should imagine) to cast aside the false pride imputed to them and offer their accounts for outside and authorised scrutiny, thus setting an encouraging example to the black sheep in their class and to all other less scrupulous men. To such of them as hanker after advertisement, this would perhaps be an excellent, annual celebration of their disinterested generosity. But I am afraid the plea of outraged dignity is too often a cloak to conceal deformities which cannot bear the fierce light of day; while the so-called inferiority of auditors and examiners of their accounts is utterly irrelevant when it is remembered that no question of social status can arise as to persons who are legally authorised to do a legal duty. I know too much to admit that the average zamindari human nature is, in any essential respects, different from ordinary human nature; and if an open door, as the adage says, would tempt a saint, it would tend no less to tempt the rich and the clever who may have the chance to draw but a mathematical line between meum and tuum. Even the apologists for the zamindars seem, after all, to concede that it would have a salutary effect, if they were called upon to render to the Committees periodical accounts, by which, I take it, those accounts should be liable to be sifted and audited. I have vertually asked for no more. Such being the true state of the case, it is for Your Lordship and my Hon'ble colleagues to say whether the distinction I wish to see abolished should or should not endure. I am aware that an interested outcry has been raised by those who have the handling of the trust-funds. But it is significant that they are not backed up by the vast mass of worshippers, and that such would doubtless be the result in case such as finger the trusts had their sympathy and support. As for their not having flooded this Council with petitions, mahzarnamas and other representations in favour of the changes I have proposed, I do not wish that the bad lesson should ever be learnt that, even in Councils constituted such as this, sound arguments could not prevail unless supported by an outside multitudinous re-echo. I think I have a right to lay stress on the fact that, while there is no popular dissent from the proposals have made, five experienced Judges of the High Court of Calcutta and—barring a few who are naturally wedded to proposals which they then selves were incubating—nearly all representative Hindus who have spoken of my proposal have accorded to it their general approval. For all I have said, if it is the sense of this Council to let the matter alone in respect of the particular proposal,—owing to the outcry in question or on any other grounds,—I am quite content not to press it.

"My next proposal relates to the constitution of the machinery, which was substituted by the Act now in force, i.e., Act XX of 1863, for the controlling hand of the Government thence withdrawn. To constitute two or more Committees in each district once for all and to hand over to those Committees certain of the institutions (i.e., those falling under section 3) and their entire property (moveable and immoveable) was an initial duty laid on Local Governments under section 7. This was as it should be. In the choice of members of such Committeees, the Local Governments were directed to bear two points in view, viz., (1) that the members selected should belong to the same religion as the one to which the institution belonged which they were to manage, and (2) that, in making the choice, the Government should, as far as possible, be guided by the wishes of the worshippers concerned. To ascertain such wishes, an election, if need be, was to be resorted to. All this is excellent enough, and I take no exception to any part of it. I shall assume, for the purposes of my Bill, that this initial duty was fulfilled all round in the amplest degree and in the best possible manner. But the Local Governments were no longer to concern themselves with the institutions from that date. The Act had, therefore, to provide for filling up of vacancies which must, from time to time, occur. The provision it enacted was that it must be by election, and that Local Governments should make rules for the purpose, including obviously the questions of who should elect and what qualifications the electors should possess. Having regard to the lapse of a generation since the Act was passed or since the Local Governments made rules in that behalf, and seeing that the system of election has received a wider application and greater development than at that time, I have in my Bill drawn up a scheme, to secure uniformity, on the lines on which electorates have been constructed for other purposes. By this I have, I find, brought a hornets' nest about my ears. I come face to face with an infinite diversity of destructive criticism, often mutually hostile, and with the touch-me-not attitude of the sensitive plant on this point; and I see little trace of any desire to suggest an alternative plan, illustrative of constructive, architectural skill. One piece of delicious criticism I have come in for by remembering previous pronouncements of the Government of India and by taking care not to clash with them, is too good to go unnoticed; for, it seems that, by excluding all the executive officers of Government from participating in the management, I have cast a deliberate and unmerited slur on those officers. This is a fair sample of the degree of mastery of prior literature with which my Bill was approached. I take no note of those who have a chronic dislike and a nervous horror for such words as 'election' and 'electorate' as applied to this country. I cheerfully agree to disagree with these, as it is perhaps no more their fault that their minds are non-receptive for the ideas suggested by these words than it is my fault that my mind is open to them. But I think that it is rather a pity that the objectors had not perceived that it was the Legislature of 18 3 and not my 'impudent' self with whom the idea of election for this purpose really originated. If only men, prepared to tilt at me, had done me the kindness of comparing my schemes with the systems of election devised under the Temple Act,—notably the one by the Government of Madras,—there would have been very little to anger them; only I have not given prominence to pecuniary qualifications, though I unmistakably and inclusively implied them—a course I thought it necessary to take in the interests of orthodox classes with whom I have been in full touch and whom I should be the last to hoodwink or embarrass. Subject to this single feature—defective only to qutward seeming—my plan for constructing an electorate is, I venture to think, just as faultless as any one else may suggest. If, therefore, the fulminations of the out-and-out foes of election are all the obstacle in my way, I would certainly not mind it, but press my proposal nevertheless. There are other reasons why I should leave it to a future time; and I know how other action may be taken to seek effect being given to it without meddling with the imperial Act XX of 1863. I do not therefore desire to urge it if it is the sense of the Council that this also must be, for the present, left alone. With this is bound up my scheme of a Central Committee, meant to minimise the need for recourse to Courts.

"Quite apart from the foregoing proposals and absolutely unconnected with them are two other proposals of mine, on which I am particularly keen. One of them is that members of the Committees under the Act should hold their places for a term of years and not for life. As to the wisdom and expediency of this course, we have had quite recently Your Lordship's most authoritative pronouncement in matters connected with the direction of the University. I venture to think that the administration of the enormous funds which belong to the religious institutions of the country is not a less onerous function. With the powers of the Committee increased, as I shall presently suggest, very many capable and pious men would be glad to devote a few years of their life to the honorary work of looking after the affairs of their religious institutions as many have been ready to serve on the Municipal and Local Boards. But they would be deterred if they were to be tied down to those institutions all the days of their existence.

"It may well be that the hope and prospect of getting rewards in the way of titles from the Government for good work on Municipal and Local Boards play an important part, as a friend of mine shrewdly observed to me. I nevertheless think that the consciousness of power to work with advantage and the satisfaction of winning the good opinion and well-merited praise of the mass of pious worshippers, who now stand aghast at their utter powerlessness, would afford a strong enough motive, besides the sure prospect of the trustees themselves being under a wholesome fear and improving, in the presence of a right in the Committees to interfere effectively, which is now absent. These observations are, I trust, enough to commend this proposal to your best and earnest consideration.

"There is but one other proposal of mine on which I am anxious to secure the sympathy and approval of the Council. It is my proposal to enlarge the powers of the Committees under section 13 of the existing Act. To my mind, it is the most important one, and—be it noted—that it does not, in the slightest degree, trench upon the principles of the Act. That section makes it, indeed, the duty of every Committee and every trustee severally to keep regular accounts of receipts and disbursements of every institution. But, beyond saying that the Committee 'shall require the production by the trustee of his accounts at least once a year,' the powers go no further in terms. Could the Committee hold an enquiry and enforce the attendance of the trustee to clear up doubts? Could they call upon him to produce proper vouchers? Could they, if they found it necessary, compel witnesses to attend? It is by no means clear that they can do all or any of these things, unless we strain—overstrain I might well say—the word 'require' in the section, in order to evolve all this. No Court, so far as I remember, has done so, nor do I think any Court would. Suppose, for argument's sake, it is granted that minds, accustomed to financial study, could detect these powers in the word 'require' and in the further word 'manage' used in connection with the Committee; still I do think that the harmless superfluity which I plead for might well be granted as elucidatory instead of driving people to costly and hazardous lawsuits to evoke a judicial interpretation, if only to remove doubts from lay minds and to instil a deterrent fear in the would-be recalcitrant. Such legislation is not uncommon. I need hardly add that by legislation in these respects we shall still be scrupulously within the intentions of the Act, and not swerve from them by so much as a hair's breadth.

"The income, it is perhaps not widely known, is very often derived from varying voluntary contributions in the shape of numerous driblets from casual, not regular, worshippers, chiefly on certain festive days or days of celebrations. But it is under the head of expenditure that frightful room would exist for palming off unexpended or fictitious sums as spent. Expenditure would necessarily fluctuate, and the one check which common prudence has recourse to is to form a previous forecast or budget in most affairs of life and in all administrative systems. This every trustee may be required to do and obtain the Committee's prior sanction. It will go a long way to minimise fraud.

"To subject the accounts of both the Committees and the trustees to a system of outside audit would carry success much further. This, I imagine, needs legislation which also would not trench upon the principles of the Act.

"There are other points in my Bill which are comparatively of minor importance. As they do not go to the root of any of my cardinal proposals, if I may so say, I venture to think that no remarks need be made on these at this stage.

"Struck by glaring instances of fraud as regards charities which are supposed to be still under the check of Madras Regulation VII of 1817 and kindred Regulations, I brought charities also within the purview of my Bill, though there was the oversight on my part to describe my Bill as an amendment in that respect also. As it is a large question by itself and outside the Act relating to temples and the like, I prefer, on second thoughts, to leave it out of my Bill. With these remarks, and the repudiations I have made in course of them, I beg to move that the Bill be referred to the Select Committee above-named."

The Hon'ble SIR CHARLES RIVAZ said:—"When my Hon'ble friend introduced his Bill in this Council in March, 1897, His Honour the present Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, who was then the Member of Council in charge of the Home Department, said that, while the Government of India consented to the introduction of the Bill, it must be distinctly understood that they were not a party to it. He proceeded to say that the Government had laid down the principles of its relations to religious endowments in Act XX of 1863, and that it adhered to those principles. He remarked that the Bill was in the main an endeavour to secure through the existing non-official Committees a closer control of the management of those endowments, but that was an aim which could only be successfully prosecuted should it appear that it had the general support of those interested and that the Government reserved to itself the absolute right to oppose the Bill, if that appeared expedient in its later stages.

"The Bill was accordingly circulated for opinions, but met with a distinctly unfavourable reception from all the Local Governments and Administrations. The Bombay Government expressed a strong opinion that legislation to the effect proposed by my Hon'ble friend or any legislation for a similar object was, so far as the Bombay Presidency was concerned, unnecessary and undesirable, that the existing law provided a sufficient remedy for any grave or palpable abuse, that there was no evidence that the proposed law was desired in the Bombay Presidency by any class of people, and that it would almost certainly create great discontent and engender widespread suspicion of the motives of the Government. The Bengal Government stated that the replies received from its local officers showed that the proposed legislation was not desired by the great body of those whom it would affect, that the Muhammadan community was unanimously opposed to it, that, as regards the Hindus, only the small minority represented by the educated classes were in favour of it, and that there was nothing to show that the present law, if resorted to, did not afford a sufficient means of remedying such abuses as existed. The North-Western Provinces Government said that the weight of the opinions which it had taken was against the Bill as being unnecessary and unworkable, that it would probably be considered as an unwarrantable intrusion by Government in religious affairs and would excite serious opposition. The Punjab Government replied that the proposed measure appeared to be quite unsuited to that Province, and would probably give rise to an immense amount of ill-feeling and discontent. The Burma Government said that the general local opinion, in which the Lieutenant-Governor agreed, was that the Bill was not suitable to or required in Burma. The Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces reported that the matter was of little importance as regards the territory under his jurisdiction, such religious institutions as exist in that part of India being generally small and of little repute or resort, but that he did not think it would be possible to organize the Central and District Committees contemplated in such a way that their decisions would command public confidence among the religions and sects affected. The Chief Commissioner of Assam while thinking that it must be admitted that the best educated native opinion is in favour of the Bill, and that there is much to justify it, since it is hardly too much to say that religious endowments in India are, as a rule, grossly mismanaged, went on to remark that the evil which it was sought to remedy was very deeply seated, and there was great danger that the cure proposed might be worse than the disease. His conclusion was that it would be highly inexpedient to extend any legislation of the proposed nature to Assam. Lastly, the Madras Government expressed a strong opinion against the Bill on the ground that the wide scope of the proposed enactment, which purported to apply to all non-Christian religions and charitable endowments throughout the whole of India, subject only to a limitation in regard to petty institutions, constituted a fundamental and fatal objection to it. They followed up this condemnation of my Hon'ble friend's Bill by sending up a Bill of their own which was intended to provide for the better protection of Hindu religious endowments in the Madras Presidency, but the Government of India declined to accord sanction to its introduction into the local Legislative Council.

"The only other opinion on my Hon'ble friend's Bill which I need mention is that of the Calcutta High Court. Five of the Judges expressed an opinion that the system suggested in the Bill should be given a trial, two of the Judges disapproved of it, another Judge said that it had been framed without sufficient consideration of the conditions and requirements of Muhammadan endowments, and the Hon'ble the Chief Justice expressed his doubt as to the expediency of the Bill.

"In the face of this preponderating mass of adverse opinion, it is obviously impossible for me to consent, on behalf of the Government of India, to my Hon'ble friend's Bill being referred to a Select Committee. He has expressed his willingness, it is true, to accept a condition of modifying some of its present provisions, but even on this understanding I am unable to agree to my Hon'ble friend's motion, because reference to a Select Committee would practically commit the Government of India to the consideration and probable passing of a measure which, whatever modifications it might receive in Committee, has been framed on lines which are opposed to their declared policy in the matter of religious endowments. This policy is enunciated in Act XX of 1863, and the Government of India, in refusing to countenance the Bill sent up by the Madras Government to which I have just alluded, declared its inability to sanction any proposal to revise the procedure or alter the principles embodied in that Act in any material way, and further expressed an opinion that the existing law affords ample facilities, if those interested choose to employ them, for obtaining an adequate remedy from the Civil Courts against dishonest trustees. If my Hon'ble friend finds himself able at any time to frame a Bill which will improve the procedure prescribed by Act XX of 1863 without interfering with its main principles, well and good. The Government will be quite ready to give it favourable consideration. But the present Bill does not fulfil this essential condition, and I cannot therefore consent to its being further proceeded with."

The Hon'ble RAI SRI RAM BAHADUR said:—"My Lord, after the speech of our colleague the Hon'ble Mr. Charlu, in which he has dealt with the subject so ably and exhaustively, and also the speech of the Hon'ble Home Member placing the views of the Government before this Council, I am rather afraid that the support I am going to give to the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Charlu will not be of much avail. But, with Your Excellency's permission, I beg to offer a few remarks in connection with the question now before the Council.

"The law relating to management and control of religious endowments, as found in Act XX of 1863, is defective in many respects. The Act has now been in force for a little less than four decades, and many shortcomings in its different provisions have been found out in the course of their actual application. The machinery provided by it for the control of religious endowments is not capable of effective and smooth working, and the result is that the funds are misappropriated and misapplied, and property is wasted by the trustees without any proper check whatever.

"I find that in the majority of the opinions submitted by different individuals and public bodies, on the Bill now before the Council, the facts of mismanagement of many of the religious endowments and the misapplication of their funds are admitted. The question is whether these evils should not be removed by a more effectual legislation than the one we have got at present. The non-intervention policy of Government with religious and charitable endowments has been departed from in cases of necessity. I can give at least one instance from my Provinces; I mean the Husainabad Endowment Act which was passed by this Council in 1878 to control the management of a religious and charitable endowment created by one of the Kings of Oudh.

"But the motion at present before the Council as made by my Hon'ble colleague Mr. Ananda Charlu is of a very limited character. He has confined it now to the modification of, and addition to, two sections of Act XX of 1863. That Act stands as a piece of legislation in force in our Statute-book. The amendments pressed by our Hon'ble colleague, without in any way trenching upon the principles of the Act, will certainly lead to its more effective working.

"With these remarks I beg to second the motion."

The Hon'ble MR. BOLTON said:—"My Lord, I desire to add some remarks to those which the Hon'ble Sir Charles Rivaz has addressed to the Council in opposition to this motion. The motion is in terms ordinary and formal, but in substance of great importance. The Hon'ble Mover is acting in exercise of a right in inviting us to refer to a Select Committee a Bill which he obtained leave to introduce in a past session, however distant, but he doubtless recognizes that the mere introduction of a Bill does not imply its eventual reference to a Select Committee. Such a reference is contingent on the approval of the principle of the measure, and it is that question which gives the present motion its importance. The issue before us—and it is manifestly of great significance—is this, whether the Council should identify itself with a proposal to establish a quasi-official control over religious institutions which the people themselves have hitherto preferred to leave without such interference.

"In coming to a decision on that issue the Government and the Council must be guided by both public and official opinion, as they are guided in respect of every Bill which is submitted to their judgment. This opinion has been sought and obtained from all parts of India, and it is adverse to the Bill. The reports which have been received agree, with rare exceptions, in deprecating or strongly opposing the proposed legislation. The exceptions are mainly found in the views of individuals and a few associations representing the most advanced section of the educated classes, whose opinion on a religious matter, be it said without disparagement, is not valued by the orthodox members of their faith, and cannot claim weight with the Government. This is no less the case in Bengal than elsewhere, and, speaking of this Province, I entertain no doubt that opposition to the Bill is strong and uncompromising outside the limited class to which I have alluded.

"Briefly, the Bill proposes to establish District Committees and a Central Committee for the control of religious and charitable institutions belonging to all non-Christian religions, and it differs from the Act which it purports to amend in this very material respect that it proposes to substitute general Committees for entire districts for Committees controlling the management of single endowments. Without entering into details, I may note that it associates the District Judges, who are mostly Europeans, with the formation of the Committees, that it proposes a system of electing the members of the Committees which is likely to bring into conflict the sects within the different religions, and that it overlooks the obstacles to the control of many of the endowments by a general Committee which are presented by usages and customs having religious force, and, therefore, immutable. These are features of the Hon'ble Member's scheme which could not be removed in Select Committee without radically modifying the Bill, if, indeed, any other workable scheme could be devised ; and they must be present to our minds in voting on this motion. We must take the Bill as it stands and have no regard to possible changes which would alter its whole principle.

"What, then, do we learn, for guidance, from the opinions which have been expressed on the Bill in its present form? We find that Hindus and Muhammadans alike have strongly protested against the interference with their endowments which it would set up ; and we have the warning that any countenance given by the Government to such legislation, and especially the vesting of the District Judges with the duty of forming the electorates for the District Committees, would raise the general suspicion of an insidious attempt to interfere with religion, notwithstanding the patent fact that such interference has been always foreign to the wish of the Government, and would create grave discontent. This apprehension is unquestionably well-founded. No cry, we are aware, is more easily excited than that of danger to religion. None, again, is more dangerous politically and more difficult to allay, and against none should the Government more prudently guard. The decision of the Government of India to oppose progress with this Bill must, therefore, commend itself not only to this Council, but also to the great mass of the people throughout the country. It may be conceded that serious abuses exist in the management of many religious endowments, and the Hon'ble Mr. Charlu is entitled to credit for an endeavour to remedy the evil ; but it is clear that the difficulties in the way of legislation are enormous, if not insuperable, and that the Government cannot be fairly and reasonably pressed and expected to accompany the Hon'ble Member into a position which would provoke religious ferment throughout India.

"A remedy for individual cases of mismanagement is available in the provisions of section 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which authorise applications to the Courts for the appointment of new trustees and the settling of new schemes of management ; and the Government may legitimately point to those provisions as ample justification for refusing to give its support to fresh legislation of the present character. It rests with the people themselves to make use of the power which they thus possess of enforcing proper management of religious and charitable trusts. The provisions of the section, it may be mentioned, have been successfully appealed to in the past.

"For these reasons I join the Hon'ble Sir Charles Rivaz in opposing the motion before the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. SMEATON said :—"As the Hon'ble Mr. Charlu has done me the honour of nominating me on the Select Committee, I think it due to him that I should state my reasons for not being able to support his motion that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee, and for agreeing with the remarks of the Hon'ble Sir Charles Rivaz that the Bill should not progress further. While I concur in most of the remarks that have been made by both the Hon'ble Sir Charles Rivaz and the Hon'ble Mr. Bolton, I equally sympathise with my Hon'ble friend Mr. Charlu, inasmuch as I think the Government, as the successor of the Hindu, Muhammadan and Buddhist Sovereigns, is under an obligation to take every available means to ensure the proper management of the vast funds which are devoted to religious and charitable endowments. I think, however, that the proposals of the Hon'ble mover are not such as are likely to accomplish the ends which he has in view ; and, moreover, I think that some of them are likely to be exceedingly inconvenient and possibly hurtful. In the first place, I notice that in section 3 the Committee, such as is contemplated by Act XX of 1863, shall prepare what the Hon'ble mover calls an electorate. The body contemplated here is the Committee which succeeded to the powers and responsibilities of the Board of Revenue, whose duty it had been to administer the funds of all the religious endowments within its jurisdiction and see that they were properly appropriated. This Committee, who succeeded to the powers of the Board of Revenue, was in fact a Committee which took cognizance of the funds of all religious institutions within the district to which it related. In other words, the powers exercised were without regard to the particular religion or sect concerned. So that, if the proposals under section 3 of the Hon'ble Member's Bill were to be carried out, we might have a committee of Hindu laymen and priests making a list of the electorate which was to govern the affairs of Muhammadan, Buddhist, Jain and Parsi endowments in the district. That, it seems to me, would be very likely to cause friction and discord among those sects and religions, who might, with some reason, resent the interference of a Hindu Committee with their affairs.

"The next matter in which I cannot agree to the Hon'ble mover's proposals is this: section 3A proposes to establish an electorate of notables, and this electorate is to select a District Committee and a Central Committee, and these two Committees are to be absolute in their power over the endowments with which they are concerned. Section 12 of the Bill runs thus:

'The District Committee of each religion or sect shall have absolute control, not inconsistent with their maintenance, over the institutions belonging to that religion or sect, including the appointment of the trustees, according to the custom prevailing in each institution as vacancies shall occur after the passing of this Act.'

"Section 13 prescribes a budget: section 14 empowers the Committee to revise the budget as it sees fit.

"And then section 16 runs thus:

'The orders of the District Committee shall be appealable to the Central Committee, whose decision shall be final.'

"In respect of this extraordinary absolute power and finality, particularly in the administration of funds, I can only say that my experience of the administration of funds by a Committee of notables is very much against the propriety of such a proposal. The only case I can at this moment recall is where a Committee of notables in a secular endowment managed the affairs of a large irrigation scheme. This Committee managed to irrigate all their own lands and pay very little rent, whereas the large majority of the poorer cultivators got very little of the irrigation and paid a very large proportion of the rents. I doubt very much if even a Committee of persons living in the odour of sanctity would be likely to avoid the temptation of possibly acting in a similar way. But the objection which to me appears to be most fatal is this: the Act applies not only to strictly religious but also to charitable endowments. Now in the province with which I am connected at present I imagine that the monasteries and dependent schools would fall under the category of religious and charitable endowments. If in the case of those monasteries, and more particularly the schools dependent on them, we are to have under sections 12 and 16 this absolute control by Committees of Buddhist notables, I very much question whether that control would be likely to operate to the advantage of those who attend the schools or to the people. Your Excellency may be aware that until recently the tendency of the superior ecclesiastical authorities in Upper Burma was distinctly averse to anything like the introduction of a liberal element into the education given in the primitive monastic schools of that province. If these triumvirate Committees—who would naturally be imbued with the prejudices of the ecclesiastical authorities—are to have absolute control over these foundations, I very much question whether the efforts of Government to introduce a liberal element into the education given to the boys of those schools would be likely to be successful; and therefore I think that the proposal to vest these absolute powers in the District and Central Committees, in respect so far at least as these monasteries and dependent schools are concerned, would be most unwise. This being my interpretation of the powers given to the District Committees under the two sections 12 and 16, I think that even on that ground alone I should be justified in opposing the further progress of the Bill."

The Hon'ble MR. RALEIGH said:—"My Lord, as this Bill was introduced before the beginning of Your Lordship's administration and long before I had a seat in this Council, I thought it right to ask my Hon'ble friend the mover of the motion for explanations with regard to his proposal, and these explanations he has very freely furnished me, and I desire to acknowledge the reasonable spirit which he has displayed in discussing the provisions of this Bill. I pointed out to my Hon'ble friend the difficulty which would occur to any practical person on reading the text of the Bill. The difficulty is of this nature: that when you are dealing with the ancient religions of India, you are not dealing with a people organised into a certain definite number of churches submitting to a certain limited number of authorities who represent them for all practical purposes, but you are dealing with very large bodies of persons imperfectly organised, united in belief and worship, but at the same time divided by differences which have often been the cause of the most serious anxiety to those who are responsible for the maintenance of order in this country. Some of the most serious troubles we have had have been due not to the conflict between one religion and another, but to the conflict between sects within the limits of one religion. When you propose out of elements of this kind to constitute an electorate under the auspices of a British Magistrate and to give to elected committees large powers of interference, obviously there is the danger that these Committees may be used by one sect against another, and thus may lead to differences so serious as to require the intervention of the Government. My Hon'ble friend has expressed his approval of the policy of 1863, when the Government endeavoured as far as possible to divest itself of responsibility for religious endowments. If we established anything like the system which the Bill proposes, we should have the responsibility of the Government restored and rendered more direct. There is not only the danger, which the Hon'ble Member has pointed out, of wounding the dignity of zamindars and other important persons who have undertaken the management of these endowments. There is the far greater danger of interfering with the mohants, and others who are invested not only with dignity but sanctity among large numbers of their countrymen. I found to my surprise and relief that there was less difference of opinion than one might have supposed between my friend and myself on points of this kind, and, so far from curling up like the sensitive plant to which he has compared himself, my Hon'ble friend met my questions boldly and fairly admitted some of them were difficult to answer. Finally, he asked me to consider whether, supposing he were willing to abandon those parts of the Bill upon which my criticism chiefly turned and were to retain merely the two important—not all important—amendments in the Act of 1863 to which he has referred, namely, the election of Committee men for a limited term and the extension of the powers which a Committee may exercise, whether the Government would be prepared to allow the Bill to go into Select Committee. Subject to any ruling which Your Lordship may give on the point of procedure, I venture to submit that this is not what Committees are intended for. When we send a Bill to Select Committee, we accept the Bill generally subject to that revision in detail which the Committee is able to give it; but I think it would be a bad precedent if we were to accept a Bill which, on the face of it, raises very large and difficult questions, and send it to Select Committee with the avowed object of having the whole substance of the Bill left out, and the Bill turned into one merely for amending two or three points in the Act of 1863. I may say that even the proposal to amend that Act would raise difficulties which would have to be carefully considered. I have no hesitation at all in supporting the Hon'ble Sir Charles Rivaz in saying that the Council ought not to allow this Bill to be referred to a Select Committee."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said:—"Reference has been made to an opinion represented on the West Coast of Bombay, that so far as that part of the country is concerned, the Bill is unnecessary. As this happens to be an Imperial Act, it is impossible to alter it so as to make it useful for certain parts and not for others, unless the Act is made declaratory and it is left to the Local Governments to extend it if they consider extension necessary. It is, I believe, equally open to the Select Committee, if this comes before them, to make that recommendation.

"Now, as to the interference to which reference has been made in several of the opinions given, I need not reiterate what I have stated already, because in no part of my Bill is there an attempt to interfere with the principles laid down in the Act of 1863. I must, however, point out this one thing. If that is considered an interference, even that is capable of being dealt with as being antagonistic to the principle of the Act, and therefore one that ought to be rejected. I say that may be done by the Select Committee, and that is the constitution by way of innovation of the Central Committee which is not contemplated in the Act which I have asked to be modified. An opinion has been stated that the evil does exist, and that it is deep-seated. Well, if the evil exists, it must be attacked, and if deep-seated, the way to deal with it is not by holding our hand altogether. It has been pointed out that the Bill is very wide, so wide as to embrace the charities. I have already explained about the end of my observations why I introduced it in the first instance, and why I consider that it was not proper to retain that part of the Bill untouched. Therefore, all the objections pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Smeaton on the ground that it was so wide that by reason of the width of it, it was not capable of being properly worked, fall to the ground.

"Then the Hon'ble Mr. Bolton has taken four objections. The first is that under the Bill there would be a kind of quasi-official control. I am sorry to have to point out that no part of my Bill aims at it, or asks for it. The interference on the part of the District Courts and of District Judges which I have invoked in my Bill is only in such cases in which defaults occur, and for which Act XX of 1863 makes an exactly similar provision. I have not asked the District Courts to exercise one single scintilla of more control than it is open to them to do under Act XX of 1863. Therefore, my Bill it has no sort of quasi-official character about it, and its reference to District Judges does not make these Judges do more than what the existing Act does. Then it is said that the agitation is mainly by the educated and not the orthodox classes. That the voice of the educated classes is heard is beyond all doubt, but that they alone feel the injury is not correct; but it will be absurd to go further. For instance, that on the important question, namely, when a trustee says he has spent Rs. 1,000 on a particular festival, whether he had actually spent Rs. 1,000, or only spent Rs. 500 and put the remaining Rs. 500 into his own pocket,—I do not know that the orthodox classes and the educated classes would differ from each other. The great object of my Bill is to prevent misapplication of funds. If, for instance, on a particular festival a trustee is in the habit of spending Rs. 1,000, I do not say and nowhere in my Bill do I wish it to be understood that that amount ought to be refused; but all I want is that it should be shown that the Rs. 1,000 have been spent. I do not think a single member of the orthodox classes would differ from me in the expression of that request. He will say, just as I do, that the trustee ought to show that he has spent the Rs. 1,000 when he says he has spent Rs. 1,000, and that he ought not to spend Rs. 500 and put the remaining Rs. 500 into his pocket. That is the question here; and in a matter like that, to say that the interests of the orthodox and the educated people—as if there were an antagonism between the two—are opposed, is to state what is not correct. It may be that in the adherence to certain ceremonies and so forth the orthodox people and the educated people may differ, but upon the question of the important points of religion they do not. The point, relevant here, is, whether money has been properly applied or not—whether the account is correct or not. That has nothing to do with orthodoxy or heterodoxy, and it seems to me therefore that, the great object of my Bill being to keep the trustees straight in their dealings with a fund not belonging to them, there is, and there can be, no antagonism between the opinions of the orthodox people and the educated classes, who, I hope, it will never be denied are also orthodox classes.

"Then again the Hon'ble Mr. Bolton has referred to the long standing usages under which succession takes place to the trusteeship. It looks as if he considered that my Bill in some sort of way wanted to divert the succession. I do not intend anything of the sort. If the part of my Bill dealing with the question is taken into account and carefully examined, it will be found that I take care to say that all the usages shall be followed and observed strictly, and that every trustee shall get his office in the way he has been getting it all along, and that neither the District Committee nor the Central Committee will have anything whatever to do to twist the right of that person from his proper course.

"These seem to me to be the observations necessary for the purpose of showing that there is not against my Bill that outrageous and prodigious objection that is believed to exist against it; but, at the same time, seeing that the Government are not in favour of referring it to a Select Committee, and as the Hon'ble Sir Charles Rivaz has been good enough to say that if the points upon which I said I am keen and the like are presented in a subsequent Bill, that Bill will be considered, I thankfully accept that explanation; I also thankfully accept the terms in which I have been referred to by the Hon'ble the Legal Member. I do not therefore wish to ask for a division on my motion."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT:—"Does the Hon'ble Member wish to withdraw his motion?"

The Hon'ble MR. ANANDA CHARLU said that the withdrawal of his motion would naturally follow from his speech.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT:—"It is for the Hon'ble Member to say if he wishes to withdraw his motion. If he does, I will ask permission of the Council for it to be withdrawn. If not, I must put the motion to the Council in the ordinary way."

The Hon'ble MR. ANANDA CHARLU said he would ask leave for his motion to be withdrawn.

The motion was accordingly withdrawn.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 8th March, 1901.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m on Saturday, the 23rd February, 1901.

The depression which at the close of the previous week was developing in Khandesh was still shallow and ill-defined on Sunday morning, but the barometer fell briskly to rapidly in Berar, the west of the Central Provinces, Central India and Rajputana on Monday, and the depression had intensified considerably. A well-defined cyclonic circulation was shewn round the depression area, winds being influenced by the depression on a large extent of country, and strong winds were reported from North-West India, Central India and the north of the Peninsula. The storm had advanced slowly eastwards and was central near Khandwa and Akola and had given light showers in the central parts of the country, the west of the North-Western Provinces and the East Punjab. Rain increased in North-West India during the next 24 hours and light to moderately heavy showers were reported on Tuesday from the greater part of the Punjab and the North-Western Provinces, and rain and snow from the North-Western Himalayas, the most important falls being—Ranikhet 1·56 inches, Simla 1·03 inches, Cawnpore 1·01 inches, Umballa 1·20 inches, Jhansi ·99 inch and Ludhiana ·92 inch. The depression as it advanced eastwards had also given rain in Central India, West Bengal and the Central Provinces, Nowgong reporting a heavy fall of 1·72 inches. The storm had filled up by Wednesday morning, but another depression had entered North-West India and was advancing eastwards through Sind. This storm gave light showers in North-West India and heavier rain in Chota Nagpur and the west of the Central Provinces as it advanced into North-East India. The heaviest falls reported were 2·17 inches at Sambalpur on Friday and 1·54 inches at Raipur and 1·05 inches at Sambalpur on Saturday. As the depression passed through Rajputana a secondary depression was formed in the South-West Punjab which gave moderate to heavy snow in the Simla and Mussooree hills and moderately heavy rain in the adjacent submontane districts. The following falls were reported on Friday morning :— Simla 1·89 inches, Chakrata ·95 inch, Mussooree ·91 inch, Umballa ·80 inch, Dehra Dun 1·14 inches and Roorkee 1·16 inches. The fall of snow at Simla was the heaviest fall received this winter. The secondary depression filled up by Saturday, the barometer rising very rapidly in the West and Central Punjab where the rise ranged from a quarter to three-tenths of an inch in amount.

Weather has also been disturbed in the south of the Peninsula and unusually heavy rain has been received in Madras, Malabar, Mysore and Coorg. Heavy falls amounting to two inches and upwards were reported from Cuddalore on Sunday, Kurnool on Monday, and from Bangalore and Cuddapah on Saturday.

Rain.—The majority of divisions report rain this week. The largest average amounts have fallen in the east division of the Central Provinces (3·25 inches), the Punjab hills (2·97 inches), the hills division of the North-Western Provinces (2·67 inches) and the central division of the East Coast (2·23 inches). The amounts received have been in excess of the normal weekly rainfall in Lower and Central Burma, Arakan, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the south-east, the south, submontane and hills divisions of the Punjab, the Central Provinces, Berar, Central India, East Rajputana, the Bombay and Malabar Coast districts (except Khandesh) and Madras.

		Inches.
North-Western Provinces—	Champawat	3·65
Punjab—	Thanesar	4·08

The rainfall of the period, December 30th to February 23rd, has been in defect in Eastern Bengal, the hills and Surma divisions of Assam, Gujarat and Kathiawar. It has been practically normal in the Brahmaputra Valley, North Bengal, the West Punjab, the Baluchistan Hills and West Rajputana and has been in excess in all the remaining divisions. The actual excess has been most marked in Chota Nagpur, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Punjab Hills, the submontane Punjab, the east and central divisions of the Central Provinces and the Madras Coast.
